The world needed steel 70 years, mostly for the railroads. It steel, but it used time be the making of steel was cess running into months need was for a method ich quickly removed the im-rities.

An Englishman, Henry Bessemer ed the way. He poured the lten iron into a large pear-ped receptacle and forced hot through it for 20 minutes. The carbon went off in flames, d the making of steel was re-ced from a matter of quarter year to half an hour.

About the same time a way making steel quickly and aply was hit upon by a man med Kelly. When they had tled their differences the mak- of steel began in a grand , and by 1874, the famous furnace was making 100 tons day. Soon followed Carnegie h his steel, Frick with his ke, and, in the days of the sts, the great combination, ited States Steel.

EW USES FOUND

By the turn of the century, enzy of railroad building had ed out. The construction of ge buildings and the advent of e automobile gave new impetus what had grown to be the sic industry. The war days nd the boom days of the late wenties kept the ball rolling.

Came the depression, and steel it rock bottom. Hundreds of housands of men were thrown ut of work and scores of plants, resenting investments of hun-reds of millions of dollars, were s silent as the tombs of the haraohs.

The railroads, as a whole, were lose to bankruptcy, new auto-mobiles were luxuries, not neces-ities, and foreign trade was at a tandstill. Nobody who had been sing steel had any use for it. The steel masters did some sober hinking. If the customers would ot come to them, they must go n the customers. This they did with amazing success.

With new methods, new alloys and new equipment, they broke into the consumer goods market with a thousand kinds of steel for a thousand kinds of purposes —the making of furniture, kit-chenware, plumbing and refriger-ators being among the more im-portant.

Today the heavy goods business is back. Tomorrow the building of the nation's homes is the mar-ket. Tonight the skies of the steel centers glow with the fires from the furnaces. Steel is king again.

Long live the king!

MANY ANNIVERSARIES

In American history the mo of April has been a criti month. It was on April 12, 18 that Fort Sumter was fir upon and for the ensuing fo years the nation was divided Civil War. This ended on Ap 9, in 1865, when Lee surrende to Grant at Appomattox Co House.

On April 21 comes the an versary of the declaration war, in 1898, with Spain—a d claration that ushered in a n era for the United States. the end of that conflict the na tion found itself the involunt if not unwilling possessor of t Philippine Islands in the Pacific, and of Porto Rico in t Caribbean. For a decade the after it required the occupati of Cuba to set the Cuban peo on the road to independence.

And on April 6, 1917, the Un ed States entered the great w as an associate of the powe allied against Germany and Au tria. For this reason as well because it comes in the fi week of the month in which t war for independence, the Ci War and the war with Spain b gan, April 6 has been set asi for national observance as ARM DAY.

It ought to receive an obse ance as truly national as th given the birth of the nation July 4. Because it was wh Washington and his soldiers d and not what they or anyone e wrote or signed that brought t the American people their ind pendence as a nation and th the foundation for the nation a our allegiance today.

Is it any wonder that throug out the month of April th American people unite to ligh anew the torch of Americ patriotism?

JURY INDICTS HEATH, 'MR. X' IN LARCENY

Thirteen indictments charging larcenies totaling $33,033 from 12 members of the Bainton Associates were returned by a Suffolk County grand jury today against John Bruce Heath, alias Neville, the mysterious "Mr. X."

Cecilia M. Bainton of Beacon street, Back Bay, executive secretary of the Associates and aunt of Heath's wife, was herself named as one of the alleged victims of the get-rich-quick scheme.

HEAVIEST LOSER

One indictment charges seven counts of larceny from her, to the total of $2111.20. Catherine McGinley, however, was named as heaviest loser.

Three counts in one indictment charge larceny of $10,178 from the McGinley woman, while three counts in another charge theft of $8500.

ARRAIGNED MONDAY

Heath will be arraigned on Monday in superior court. He is now being held in Charles street jail in default of bail of $20,000.

Last witnesses before the grand jury probe previous to indictments being returned were Sergeant Daniel Murphy, state trooper attached to the attorney-general's office, and Miss Marion Chamberlain, treasurer of one of Health's enterprises.

HELEN JORDAN MURPHY JOSEPH MURPHY
Elopement Revealed by Police

Three officers of the police special service squad dropped into an all-night theater early today—and, accidentally, disclosed that Boston has a child marriage of its own, with a bride of only 14 and the bridegroom just 20.

Following what began as a routine questioning of the couple sighted in the theater, the officers took Joseph Murphy of Fifield street, Dorchester, and little Geraldine Helen Jordan of Freeport street, Dorchester, to police headquarters.

The youthful couple there produced a marriage certificate, issued at Seabrook, N. H., in proof of their contention that they had been duly married and had a right to be together anywhere—even in an all-night theater at a time when most 14-year-olds are in bed.

SAY MOTHER CONSENTED

Both Joseph and Helen insisted they had permission from her mother to marry, but when the mother was contacted she denied it.

Further than that, the mother, Mrs. Helen Jordan, 32, hastened to headquarters and insisted that she would prefer charges against young Murphy for eloping with her daughter, pupil in the seventh grade at the Mather School, Meeting House Hill.

Deputy Police Superintendent William W. Livingston, at her insistence, ordered Murphy booked on a charge of abduction and his child bride on a charge of being a stubborn child. They were turned

HEAVY GOODS PRICES VEX PRESIDENT

Stocks Topple

New York, April 2—President Roosevelt's attack on the current cost of durable goods started a wave of selling on the stock market. [illegible] share.

Prices of leading issues suffered one of the worst breaks of the year, with the ticker falling behind in a rush of selling.

Support was met around noon hour, but recoveries were negligible.

Washington, April 2 (INS)—President Roosevelt frankly warned today that the current rapid rise in production of durable goods as compared with consumer goods constituted a danger sign in the national economic field which must be met.

He proposed that government expenditures for durable goods be discouraged for the time being, while expenditures for consumers goods are encouraged.

The Executive pointed out that almost every time in history the durable goods curve had passed up above consumer goods, within 12 or 18 months the country had run into a definite falling off in production and prices, if not into a depression.

CITES STEEL JUMP

Current high prices in the durable goods field, concern the President, he said, and he does not believe the extent of those increases is justified by boosts in payrolls.

The President cited the $6 increase in steel. According to the central statistical board, he said, this is a jump of two to three times more than justified by recent wage increases.

Copper, Mr. Roosevelt continued, is now selling at 17 cents, although even such big mines as Anaconda can produce that metal at a profit at eight or nine cents.

The President told his press conference he had outlined this philosophy to a group of congressmen yesterday who called to urge extension of the Public Works Administration.

WANTS BUYING HALTED

He pointed out to this group that the government already has purchased about $250,000,000 worth of steel and is buying a large portion of the total cement output.

The time has come to slow down on construction of bridges and other structures requiring material on which prices are soaring, he declared.

Instead, such work as channel dredging and building of earth dams will aid in spreading income at the bottom where it is needed.

Mr. Roosevelt pointed out that today's situation is a complete reversal of the 1933 condition, when Louis Douglas, then his budget director, was insisting that only through rescue of the durable goods industry could the country be brought back.

462,000 COAL MINERS OUT ON STRIKE

BULLETIN

New York, April 2 (AP)—Settlement of the soft coal strike this afternoon before the end of its first day was predicted today by unusually well-informed quarters.

New York, April 2 (AP)—Whistles of hundreds of soft coal mines from Pennsylvania westward to Washington and in the South were silent today as the long threatened strike of the United Mine Workers of America began without fanfare.

The shutdown of the nation's bituminous industry in which 462,000 men are employed, with prospect of presidential intervention if it lasts more than a few days, followed the failure of negotiations to effect a new wage agreement in six weeks of conferences.

The miners' demand for time and a half for overtime proved the principal stumbling block after other barriers had been hurdled but even as the strike became effective, hope was expressed that settlement could be effected to permit resumption of operations Monday.

The industry, which in 1935 produced coal valued at $700,000,000, shut down with only 30 days' supply above ground, operators estimated.

Wallingford, Conn., April 2 (INS)—Two factory buildings were blown to bits, one person was injured and over 150 workers miraculously escaped injury today when a series of blasts wrecked the plant of the M. Backus & Sons, fireworks manufacturers.

The injured man was Quentin Dunn of Yalesville, operator of the machine which became ignited. He received severe but not critical burns.

2 MORE BACK ALIBI IN MODEL SLAYING

New York, April 2 — Joseph Gedeon, police-tagged "principal suspect" in the triple slaying on Beekman Hill, won the first step in his fight for freedom today. At the same time he learned that three witnesses have come forth to aid him in his dogged insistence that he is innocent.

The pale little man was arraigned in felony court on charges of illegally possessing a pistol and bail was set at $10,000. If he can raise it, he will be free once more unless police formally charge him in connection with the killings.

Gedeon was told by his attorney, Peter L. F. Sabbatino, hatt unexpected support had come to back up the client's charges that "a Boston millionaire" might have murdered beautiful young Ronnie Gedeon because she had spurned him.

And Gedeon was told too, that two new witnesses had appeared to supply explanations for the suspected man's movements at hours authorities asserted the murders took place.

DEATH'S HOUR

Police were so completely upset by the appearance of one of the two new alibi witnesses that now they were willing to concede that the mother of beautiful 20-year-old Ronnie Gedeon and the lodger, Frank Byrnes, might not have been killed at 11 o'clock Saturday night, but after 3 Sunday morning —with Ronnie.

Most astonishing, however, was a communication to authorities from a man named John Pattantyus in Los Angeles, who told

3d Degree Grill of Father

New York, April 2—In the mad nightmare of the third degree Joseph Gedeon, the frail little man with the powerful arms, has clung grimly to his story that a suitor his daughter Ronnie spurned must have slain the model, her mother and Frank Byrnes.

How he clung to that story is no better illustrated than is this fragment of the type of questioning he underwent. Sleepless, beaten, broken in body, tramping around and around in ceaseless circles as a spotlight played on his face, Gedeon answered the barking of his inquisitors thus:

Q—You are poor. Your wife had a rooming house business worth $8000. Did you want money from her? A—I'm very hard up. But I gave my wife my share in that business when we separated years ago. It was always in her name. I just stepped out of the picture.

Q—You had an alibi for the time covering the murders. You said you played skee ball from 8 p. m. to 2:55 a. m. Easter Sunday, at which time the bar closed. A—That's right. That's where I was.

Q—But now the bartender says he only saw you at 8 p. m., at midnight, and at closing. (Mrs. Gedeon died at 11:00; Byrnes about midnight; Veronica about 3:20 a. m.). A—The bartender was busy all night. Maybe he didn't see me continuously. But I was there, in the crowd.

Q—You didn't love your wife? A—She was an ignorant woman. She didn't know how to bring up her children. But I wouldn't kill her.

Q—You didn't love Veronica? A—She was never dutiful to me. I paid $20 for the Book of Knowledge when she was little. She wouldn't study it. All she wanted was movies. But Ethel, my other daughter (Mrs. Ethel Kudner), she read the book. She was a good girl.

London Railroad Crash Kills 8

London, April 2 (AP)—A crowded rush hour community train plowed into the rear of another on a 60-ft.-high viaduct between Battersea Park and Victoria Station today, killing eight persons, injuring 40 and sending dazed survivors teetering like tight-rope walkers along the narrow trackway.

An even worse tragedy was averted by the presence of mind of one passenger, who struggled from the wreckage and ran, swaying, along the tracks to flag down a third train speeding from Victoria station.

The last carriage of the first train, which had stopped on the track, was a shambles. Its wooden body was ripped off completely. Four men were killed in one compartment; three women in another.

Flames burst out when one coach was knocked across a live rail, to rest crazily on the viaduct.

"Look out for the live rails!" survivors screamed.

The current was quickly shut off. The fire was put out.

Rescue crews, reaching the viaduct with long ladders, worked three hours in a soaking rain to pull the dead and injured from the wreckage.

of Ronnie relating fears a married suitor might "make trouble" for her. Pattantyus' letter said she had told him that only a week before she was slain.

This man, literally reaching across a continent to help the suspected father of the model, furnished surprising confirmation to the charge that Gedeon had made and reiterated over and over—that "a Boston millionaire," spurned by Ronnie, must have killed the girl.

MAN KNOWN TO POLICE

Pattantyus, in his letter, described himself as an old friend and former roomer of Mrs. Gedeon and Ronnie. To Los Angeles police he told the story related in his letter:

"Veronica told me, a week before she was murdered, that she was afraid of trouble with a married man who had been courting her.

"I have known Veronica since she was a little girl, and she looked on me as an old friend. On March 20, the day before I started back for Los Angeles, she said good-bye to me and told me she was worried about this man.

"She said he had told her, 'If I can't have you, no one else will'."

Officials admitted that this information had been brought to their attention. They said they know the identity of the man referred to in the Pattantyus story, and expect to pick him up for questioning soon.

CHARGES CLIENT HOUNDED

In the courtroom, Attorney Sabbatino asked that nominal bail of $50 be allowed for Gedeon.

"Police are just hounding this man," the lawyer said. "They are barking up the wrong tree."

"I understand this man is the principal suspect in the triple murder. I ask that bail be set at $15,000."

The magistrate pondered for a moment, finally decided thta bail should be $10,00 and set the case for a hearing later in the day.

RONNIE'S SLAYING

Reconstruction of Gedeon's "perfect alibi," which police claimed yesterday to have cracked, was accomplished through the aid of William Ryan, East 27th street hardware dealer, and Anthony Rocco, who lives in an apartment above Gedeon's shop.

Before shifting their theory today, police had maintained that Mrs. Gedeon and Byrnes had been murdered at 11:09 Saturday night. They relied on the report of an occupant of the apartment house where Mrs. Gedeon lived for that.

This witness, Cosmos Candanis, had told of hearing a woman scream and a man groan at exactly 11:09 o'clock.

Ronnie was slain a few minutes after 3 a. m. Sunday, according to the police theory. It was at that hour she said goodnight to an escort and stepped into the apartment of death.

POLICE SPIKE ALIBI

Under questioning, Gedeon's previous "alibi witnesses" were unable to swear where the little upholsterer was from 9 p. m. until midnight Saturday.

They placed Gedeon in Corrigan's Cafe from midnight until 3 o'clock Sunday morning. Gedeon said he went home then.

But today Ryan had sworn seeing Gedeon, not only earlier Saturday evening, but from 10:20 until 11:30, playing skee-ball at the cafe. When he left Corrigan's at 11:30, Ryan maintained, Gedeon was still playing skee-ball.

It is a fifteen-minute walk from Corrigan's to the Gedeon apartment house, even for a fast walker.

TRAPPED BY TIME

If Gedeon were playing skee-ball at 11:30 and if he were playing skee-ball at midnight, it was argued, he could not have walked to the apartment house, committed two murders and returned. Not in a half hour. And there is no evidence he rode.

That, police said, was why they were willing to admit [illegible] Candanis' story of the screams and groans might not be definite proof of the slayings of Mrs. Gedeon and Byrnes at 11:09 o'clock.

Rocco's story confounded the story that Gedeon was "missing" for an hour after leaving Corrigan's at closing time—three o'clock Sunday morning.

Rocco swore that it was five minutes after three when he was entering his apartment and [illegible] Gedeon.

SOBER ENOUGH TO TALK

"Gedeon was pretty tight," Rocco said, "but he answered me when I said: 'Good morning.' I know that it was five after three, all right. I'm sure of it. I was coming home myself, you see."

According to the story of Stephen Butter, Ronnie's escort on her last night alive, it was "after 3 o'clock" when he said goodnight to her in the hallway outside her apartment.

How Gedeon learned of the new developments was his secret, because police have been keeping newspapers away from him. But he knew. His attitude showed that.

His confidence had returned and it wasn't only because he had had a night of rest, although that helped.

HIS SCANT BREAKFAST

The little upholsterer with the big arms had gone to sleep promptly at 10 o'clock last night. Probably the sleep of exhaustion after his ordeal of questioning.

He was awakened at 5:30 this morning in Cell No. 1 at police headquarters and asked if he wanted something to eat.

"Yes," was his reply. "Some coffee and a coffee cake. That's all."

He ate with relish, then composed himself to wait for the line-up. It came all too quickly.

Gedeon was marched out in the big chamber with the searching spotlights and put in his place with a motley array of gun-carriers, beggars, thieves, chiselers, confidence men and pickpockets.

IN THE SPOTLIGHT

More than 200 detectives, most of whom had not seen the little man before but were as curious as the general public to know what he looked like, filled the galleries in the room.

One by one the exhibits were singled out, questioned, marched away.

Then it came Gedeon's turn.

Only once did Inspector Donovan come close to referring to the murders that have baffled New York's entire detective force.

"Are you married?" Donovan asked.

"Yes."

He admitted calmly that the gun detectives found in [illegible] living quarters behind his upholstery shop in East 34th Street had been in his possession 29 years.

He repeated the story he told detectives when they found it—that it was given him by a friend who went off to work in the Pennsylvania coal mines long ago and never returned. Police admit that the gun has no reference at all to the murder mystery.

HERE FOR 30 YEARS

Charged with violation of the Sullivan anti-firearms law, Gedeon denied he had any idea that he was breaking a law. He gave his history fully, said he came here some 30 years ago from Hungary on the steamer "New York."

The questions were barked by Inspector Joseph Donovan as Gedeon stood there, lights playing on every line of his face.

When it was all over, Gedeon was taken out to felony court to await his turn before the bar of justice. But only on a charge of illegal possession of a pistol.

Meanwhile police were confing their activities in the investigation to two widely variant searches.

One was a search for a 12-inch upholsterer's "regulator" — a thing like an oversized darning needle. They think it might have been the weapon that pierced Frnak Byrnes' brain. They hope if they find it to connect it in some way with the man they suspect of the slayings.

Scores of sanitation department workers were searching sewers in the midtown East Side blocks flanking the apartment house where the murders were committed, thinking the "regulator" might be buried in the undrground mire.

And scores of detectives and patrolmen were seeking information that would lead them to the women — the five women — they claim played prominent parts in Gedeon's recent life.

One was the 35-year-old Hungarian who lived with Gedeon for a month in his bemirrored bed-chamber back of his upholstery shop. She was "Little Ruth." There were others, "Big Ruth," Rose, Ethel and Bertha.

WON'T TALK OF SUIT

What has happened to the old brown coat that detectives found in Gedeon's shop yesterday was not disclosed. It was known that it was in police headquarters being examined in the belief that it was the brown coat he was described as wearing Saturday night. But police had nothing to say about it.

A tip concerning a "mystery package" that Gedeon had on Tuesday came to police anonymously. A detective declared:

"Gedeon left his upholstery shop at 2 p. m. Tuesday, bound for the morgue. He had the package, about 27 inches long and 10 inches wide, under an arm. He told a newspaperman it contained burial clothes and that he was taking it to the morgue.

"At the morgue Gedeon was told the bodies of his wife and daughter were at the funeral parlor. He took a taxicab to the funeral place and asked to see the bodies, but made no mention of burial clothes. When he left in a huff, because he was not permitted to see the bodies, he took the package with him. When he was next seen, two hours later, he did not have the parcel. And we have not learned what became of it."

Housewives Bar Doors In N. Y.

New York, April 2 (INS)—New York's most appalling "mass murder," which left the bodies of beautiful Veronica Gedeon and her mother in a midtown apartment a few yards from the corpse of a roomer, has closed the doors of virtually every home in the city to canvassers and collectors.

Fearing they may suffer a fate similar to that which befell Miss Gedeon and her mother, housewives today were refusing to open their doors to anyone but relatives and friends.

Q. & A. In Third DEGREE

GEDEON FACES POLICE GRILL

man. For two or three years I haven't owned gloves.

Q—A gray glove was found in your wife's living room. Was it your glove? A—I tell you I haven't any gloves. I don't know whose it is.

Q—Ever in trouble before? A—Never. No criminal record. I've been an American citizen eight years.

Q—You have powerful hands for such a little man? A—Yes, I'm an upholsterer. We get strong, calloused hands from stretching and pulling cloth and leather.

Q—They are really very strong. A—Yes. You see, I'm a good bowler. I use a sixteen-pound ball and I have bowled seventy strings in a night. In case you don't know that's a lot.

Q—You were bowling the other night when police wanted to talk to you? A—Yes, I bowled seventy games Tuesday night. Bowled till six in the morning.

Q—You were shocked when you went into the apartment? A—Yes, I was. That poor boarder—that poor boarder — how awful he looked, lying there.

Q—People who saw you in the bar that night say you wore a brown suit. Where is it? A—I had on the same suit as now—this gray suit.

Q—There was adhesive tape on the back of Ronnie's neck. A—Yes. She had her hair done up in steel curlers. And one little strip of tape to hold the crimpers together.

Q—But under her was a whole roll of tape. A—Yes? Maybe she was putting her hair up when she was attacked. M—' ; she carried it from the bathroom to where she was found dead.

Q—Have you any money? A—No. And my telephone bill is $9.70.

Explains Money

Q.—You had no money early Saturday night. And yet Sunday morning you had money, both in Corrigan's bar, and later when you went to your wife's home intending to have dinner? A.—Yes. I collected $20 Saturday night. But I had to pay my sewing girl $5. By Sunday I had $4 left.

Q.—Where do you get all your money for bowling? A.—Well, I guess most of my money goes that way.

Q.—How do you think these people died? A.—I think a tantalized man came in and knocked my wife senseless. Then he killed that boarder. Then he finished the woman off at his leisure

Q—But your daughter? A—. Well, maybe he was waiting for my daughter. Maybe the man was drunk.

Q—You're pretty good with women? A—Well, these American men—they don't know how to approach a woman. Ronnie, now. She had a millionaire running after her. I think he wanted to marry her. But first he wanted an affair. He offered her money. She wouldn't have him.

Q—What was wrong? A—He was too abrupt. A man can't rush up and press attention on a woman. He startles her. First he must be kind. Must soothe her. Then perhaps she'll come to him.

He Loves Life

Q—You don't regard yourself as being abnormal? A—No. I am not abnormal at all. I am just a man who appreciates life.

Q—Why have you got all those pictures of nude women around your room? A—They are odd—they aren't nasty pictures. I got them out of art magazines.

Q—You have some peculiar ideas about the relation of men and women, haven't you? A—Well, I think there is always a conflict between the sexes. Women want to dominate men, but men should not let them do that.

Q—You mean it's the business of men to control women? A—If you don't control them they take advantage of you.

Q—What did you quarrel with your wife about when you and she separated? A—Nothing in particular. They were not respectful to me at home. So I said, "I will leave. You live your own life and I will live mine."

Q—You didn't hate your wife? A—No.

Q—Did you love her? A—Well, sh was my wife.

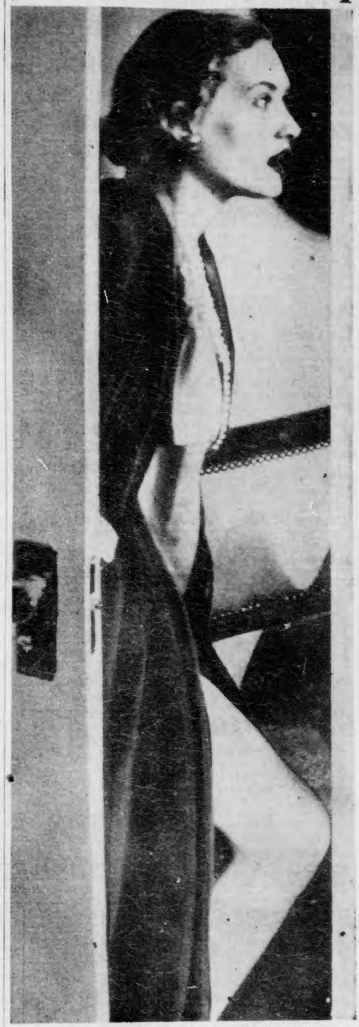
Q—If you didn't commit this crime, who do you think did? A—I think it was some man Ronnie had fooled.

Q—Do you know anybody who answered that description! A—No. I didn't know anybody who was friendly with my wife and daughter. I think some man got into the apartment who became insane with desire. I think such a man must have committed these horrible murders. Maybe he was crazy with drugs. Some one of you policemen told me you found marijuana cigarette butts in the living-room. (Police have denied this.)

Q—Have you ever been sick? A—About eight years ago I had a nervous breakdown.

Q—But you're absolutely healthy now? A—Oh, once in a while I have a cold or something.

Heretofore Unpublished Poses of Veronica Gedeon, Tragedy Girl



International News Photograph Service

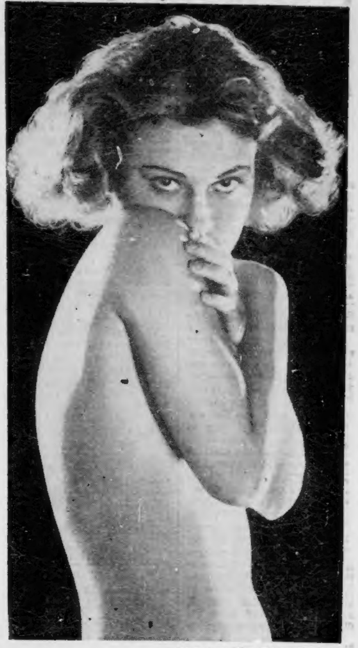
International News Photograph Service

"Ronnie" seemed carefree, full of the joy of living when this photograph was made for an advertisement appearing a few months ago. The male model was her professional admirer. Even as this picture was made, somewhere in the great metropolis of New York there were ten fingers that were fated to strangle the life out of her beautiful body on Easter morn.



International News Photograph Service

Here is another artistic pose of the slain model, among several score, which have appeared from time to time, but little heeded because Veronica Gedeon was then a living, breathing object of vital humanity. Now the pictures are avidly sought everywhere.

THE BRIGHTER SIDE

By DAMON RUNYON

Copyright, 1937, by King Features Syndicate, Inc. International and all other rights reserved.

It has been discovered that the geographical center of New York city is a block in the borough of Brooklyn.

This news will be a terrific shock to many of the younger inmates of the Big Town who have been going along the past couple of years thinking that the center of the city is that strip of West 52nd st. that lies between 5th and 6th avenues.

Damon Runyon

This block is the scene of many of the current high clubs, in which an awful din passes for joy unconfined. It is curious, is it not, how sounds that once seemed sweetest music to the ear finally become just noise to you?

We have been but a casual visitor to the New York night clubs of late years. We depend for news of them on our friends, Mr. Walter Winchell, Mr. Louis Sobol, Mr. Ed Sullivan, Mr. Leonard Lyons, Mr. Bill Farnsworth and the other columnists who make a point of jotting down happenings in the nocturnal resorts.

There are night clubs in New York at this time in which we never have set foot. Not many years ago we would have blushed to make this confession. We would have felt that we were dropping out of civic activities. We would have considered ourself remiss in our duty as a citizen. We would have felt pretty bad, we can tell you that.

Sad Experience

But the last time we visited a New York night club, which was a couple of months ago, we had a depressing experience.

We met six waiters and a captain we have known for 20 years, heard four performers of almost equal vintage, and counted 14 customers who were present on the first occasion we ever entered a night club. Six of them were ladies.

We spent the evening listening to reminiscences of other night club nights. When we finally took our departure, we found ourself tottering slightly. We suddenly felt quite aged, and all tuckered out from traveling old trails.

Now this is not at all our idea of a night club. Our idea of a night club is that it should be a place in which one can relax and divest oneself of all care, and to laugh, ha-ha, and to make merry. To be young, and light-hearted again.

We know the veteran captain means all right, but we think he is something less than tactful when, as he is escorting one to a table, he remarks:

"We've got a nice place here, sir. Not as lively as the old Pekin, of course, but all right. That was the spot, wasn't it, sir? Do you remember—"

Feels Age

And the veteran waiters mean all right, too, when they drift over one by one to say hello, and to murmur that they have not seen as much of you as they did around the Tokio, or the Garden, or Rector's, or Billy Gallagher's.

Or maybe they come down as late as the El Fay, but by that time a fellow has commenced to feel the weight of the years that have gone. The light that was burning bright in his eyes when he entered at the thought of the lissome young lassies he might behold, is dimmed down to a flickering spark.

It is extremely difficult for one to put the proper youthful ardor into one's glances at lissome young lassies when one feels that he is being regarded somewhat reproachfully by veterans who knew him as far back as Mr. Gil Boag's Moulin Rouge.

One feels that perhaps the veterans are remembering things. That they may be observing one's technique, and comparing it with the period of the Plantation, when it was pretty good. The thought is most dispiriting. One feels that one might just as well go on home and spend the evening glancing at the wife of one's bosom.

She may understand.

Location Good

The only change in the New York night clubs in many years is in the matter of location.

It seems to us that the present idea of centering them in one neighborhood is a most economical arrangement for the customers.

The customers can stagger from one to the next. It also works out to the advantage of the night club owners. They get the money the customers used to spend on taxi fare traveling up to Harlem, and down to Greenwich Village, and all over the lot. The taxi jockeys are the only losers.

Still, we never begrudged the taxi drivers the fare to Harlem. It was generally a journey via Central Park. A taxi, Central Park, and you —Heigh-ho, heigh-ho!

Question Mark

We once had what the boys call "a piece" of a night club.

This night club was called the Question Mark. The question was whether it would pay off. It was in the late Honest John Kelly's old gambling house, an ornate establishment in West 44th street.

Our partners in the Question Mark were Mr. Dapper Dan McKentrick, Mr. Benny Murphy, and Mr. Good Time Charley Friedman, gentlemen all more or less well known in managerial capacities in the manly art of scrambling ears.

Whenever one partner approached the cash register, all the other partners attended him. We liked each other's company. The Question Mark might have made money had we been able to afford more than four waiters.

It happened that we generally dined at the same time, though at separate tables, and as each partner required a waiter to attend his wants, there never was any service for the cash customers. After awhile, there never were any cash customers, either.

IT'S ON THE AIR! "Jobs by the Minute" are broadcast each morning over Radio Station WORL between 7:45-8:00 A. M., one hour later on Sundays.

SPURN GRAFT, TIMILTY TELLS NEW POLICE

The men, whose average age is 32 years, were sworn into office by Chief Clerk Thomas Gill.

WARNS AGAINST GRAFT

In his address, Police Commissioner Timilty declared:

"Dishonesty is an unforgivable sin in the department. By dishonesty you know what I mean. I mean accepting graft, because if you accept money from violators of the law, you become common, cheap grafters.

"You bring scandal on the department and you will bring prosecution in the law courts upon yourself. You can't get away with it, because if you succeed in obtaining acquittal, your intimate associates will know all the facts and you never will be trusted with a confidential mission of any description.

"You will be an outcast. Be honest. Above all things, be honest.

"After your day's work is done, you also must be careful about your associates. If you associate with dissolute women, gamblers, racketeers or others who live outside the law, your reputations will suffer and it will soon become common information among your associates in the department.

LIQUOR ADVICE

"Let me assure you that drunkards are not tolerated in this department. You will go constantly armed. Booze and firearms do not mix. A drunken policeman is more than a disgrace to the department. He is a menace to the community. The penalty for drunkenness wil be dismissal."

Superintendent Edward W. Fallon, following the commissioner, reiterated many of the points brought out by Commissioner Timilty and stressed the importance of not "mixing with politicians."

He also told the "rookies" to sever what connection they had with ony labor unions.

Among the new patrolmen were four former Metropolitan policemen, a private detective, a theater manager, a man who spent five years in the army and an expert horseman, two state prison guards, many national guard members, a highway traffic engineer and a former member of the merchant marine.

MANY LINGUISTS

Soe are expert pistol shots while others speak various languages including Italian, Spanish, French, Dutch, German, Ukranian, Polish, Gaelic and Dutch.

During their month's training, each man will be given a "taste" of practical police work each Saturday. Each man was assigned to a station.

Meanwhile, Boston's big police shakeup which was scheduled to go into effect today was enlivened by a blast from John W. Haigis, Republican, defeated for the governorship.

The youth and his child bride were arraigned privately in Judge Richard M. Walsh's lobby, Murphy pleading not guilty to the abduction charge, on advice of the judge. Then he was held in $2000 for a hearing next Tuesday.

Helen was held in $1000 for a hearing the same date on the stubborn child charge. When she was placed in charge of the probation officer, instruction were given that the girl be subjected to a medical examination.

WANTS COUPLE PUNISHED

Both were to be sent to Charles Street Jail to await the hearing.

Meanwhile the mother told police that not only did she want Murphy punished for the elopement but she wished her own daughter placed in some institution.

Mrs. Jordan said her husband left home 11 years ago and that she is on the welfare rolls, receiving $6 a week. Helen is an only child.

Officers Joseph McCleary, William O'Connor, and Edward McGhee, in a routine inspection as part of regular special service squad work, swung into the all-night theatre in Scollay square and gazed around, to see if they could observe any lads for whom police "tickets" were out.

CLINGS TO HUSBAND

There were none among the scattered audience, most of them dozing, but the officers were attracted to little Helen, snuggled against the shoulder of a youth and both watching the screen.

Because of the girl's youth, the officers drew the couple aside and asked what she was doing out at that hour of the morning.

"We're married and we're on our honeymoon," said Helen, holding to Murphy's arm.

The amazed officers looked at each other. Then they questioned the couple further. It was decided to take them to headquarters and iron the matter out, there being few 14-year-old brides around as a precedent.

At headquarters the girl fished in a handbag and produced a marriage certificate, issued at Seabrook by David C. Chase, justice of the peace, on March 21. Witnesses to the marriage were given as Joseph Crim and Joseph Hession.

"I met Joe in a skating rink in Neponset last summer," said the girl.

"We bumped into each other and fell down. It was fun, so we both laughed. Then we got to talking and Joe took me home that night.

"We saw a lot of each other after that and we finally decided to get married. I told mother about it and she said it was all right. And why isn't it all right? If that Tennessee girl could marry at nine, then I can marry at 14. Besides, I'll be 15 next August.

WED, BUT WENT TO SCHOOL

"Someone told us Seabrook was a good place to try and get married, so we went there on March 15 and filed our intentions. And we gave our right ages, too.

"The next Sunday, March 21, we went back there and we were married. There's the certificate.

"I went back to school until Tuesday of this week. Then we took a place in the South End and tried to decide what we'd do on our honeymoon. We both thought the all-night shows would be swell."

Under New Hampshire law, the marriage can be annulled only by superior court action, according to Dudley W. Orr, assistant attorney general at Concord, N. H.

Such annulment can be requested by the parents or a legal guardian in instances where the girl is less than 18 years of agee the minimum legal "age of consent," he said.

Helen said she would go back to school and finish this term, even if a bride. She was making other plans for her wedded life when an officer returned to the room with word that her mother had been communicated with and had denied giving permission for the marriage.

The mother came to police headquarters and insisted that the charges be lodged against her daughter and son-in-law. Helen slid over on the bench and Murphy put his arm around her shoulders.

Easy for Workers

Thanks to mild winter weather, which encouraged autoists to put 100,000 more cars than usual on the road during January, February and March, workers at the registry of motor vehicles were enjoying an unexpected early-April lull, today.

ALLAN WILSON OFFICE ROBBED

During the night burglars broke into the High street office of A. Towle Co., owned by Allan Wilson, and rifled the place of $1000 worth of office equipment.

"The burglars must have had an auto," Wilson informed police, "as they caried off with them five typewriters, two adding machines, one dictaphone, a check writer and other office equipment."

Tabernacle, Radio Station Razed

Zion, Ill., April 2 (AP)—Fire destroyed the Shiloh Tabernacle and Radio Station WCBD today and Wilbur Glenn Voliva, overseer of the Christian Apostolic Church, said "I haven't any doubt it was intentionally started."

Voliva estimated the total loss at between $600,000 and $700,000. He said the tabernacle, built in 1902, was falued at between $500,000 and $600,000 and the radio station at $150,000.

The religious leader said he and an attendant discovered the fire and sounded the alarm.

"I saw smoke coming from many different places in the large building," he said. "I went in and discovered flames in rooms as far apart as 200 feet."

Zion's two pieces of fire fighting equipment were joined by one from nearby Waukegan. They were handicapped by lack of water pressure and were forced to draw water from a small lagoon.

BURNS PLEADS NOT GUILTY

Daniel F. Burns, 26, secretary to Mayor John D. Lynch of Cambridge, pleaded not guilty to three charges in East Cambridge District Court today, after being arrested last night when his car was in a triple crash on Broadway, Cambridge.

Charges against him are drunkenness, operating an automobile while under the influence of liquor and driving to endanger.

Burns, whose home is in Dover street, North Cambridge, was arrested in Cambridge Fire Headquarters station, near where the accidents occurred. Police said he denied any knowledge of the accident. He was taken into custody by Sergeant John R. King and Patrolman Edward Flynn, Arthur Fitzmaurice and Frank McCullough.

MOTHER GUILTY IN BAG THEFTS AT CHURCH

Trembling and weeping, a mother of five children pleaded guilty today in Roxbury court to larceny of handbags from women worshipers at Mission church.

The defendant, Mrs. Angela Richard, 38, of Hiawatha avenue, Waltham, who was accompanied to court by two of her grown sons, was sent to the Psychopathic Hospital for ten days' observation.

Police said she took the purses at Wednesday afternoon blessing services over a long period and was finally detected by the Rev. John Keegan, one of the curates.

PAID HER DEBTS

In a voice so low that Judge Frankland W. Miles had to ask her to repeat several times, Mrs. Richard said she had taken an average of about one handbag a week for a year and a half.

She pleaded guilty to nine counts of larceny.

"I psed it to pay bills," she said, dabbing her eyes with a handkerchief, when Judge Miles asked her what she had done with the money.

JUDGE PUZZLED

"Didn't it bother your conscience to steal in a church, while other women were praying?" he asked her.

"No," said the defendant.

"I don't know what to do with you," said the judge. "Any woman who would steal in church and not be bothered by it—there is probably something wrong and I will commit you for observation."

$25,000 'Throne-Auto' Clue to Cult Leader

Delight Jewett, 17-year-old Denver high school girl, whose startling charges against John W. Hunt, disciple of Father Devine, have stirred a nation-wide furore.

"DIVINE" MOTIF IN FITTINGS OF COACH

Los Angeles, April 2 (AP)—John Hunt, alias "St. John the Revelator," still was missing from his Beverly Hills "heaven" today, sought on Mann act charges involving a 17-year-old Denver girl.

The pudgy, 200-pound white follower of Father Divine, Negro religionist, is accused of transporting pretty Delight Jewett here from Colorado for immoral purposes.

U. S. District Attorney Pierson M. Hall said he was considering charges against several close associates of Hunt in Father Devine's local flock.

The last clue of Hunt's whereabouts was a report by a Pasadena coach works, where a $25,000 "throne car" is under construction for him and his Negro cult leader.

CALLS SELF ST. JOHN

The 33-year-old scion of a wealthy Cleveland family appeared at the shop last Saturday, attendants said. When he ordered the car builty two months ago, he told a salesman he was "St. John the Revelator."

Majestic fittings are planned for the 10-passenger machine, supplied with a 265-horsepower engine of expensive make.

An elevated "hrone" is placed in the center of the rear seat, flanked on either side by star-shaped windows. A canopy of milk-white plush, dotted with golden stars, has been designed. A dais before the throne is wide enough for four secretaries, or "recording angels," as Hunt described them. On the radiator he ordered placed an elaborate "dove of peace."

HOTEL MEN GIVE CLUES

Federal officers were informed the "rolling throne" was destined to be used on his west coast visits by Father Divine and at other times by Hunt.

A push-button, it was planned, would slide down the top of the tonneau, revealing the ocupant of the throne "to the multitude."

Detectives, seeking evidence that Hunt induced Mis Jewett to come to California received reports from thre Palm Spring hotels.

Last Christmas Eve, a man and woman drove up in a luxurious limousine and said they were disciples of Father Divine, declared hotel attaches. Two of the hostelries refused lodging to the couple when they registered under "divine" names. A third permitted them to stay the night with no further identification.

$7063 AWARD IN BUS CRASH

James P. Egan, 63, of Gilman street, Somerville, a fireman at Milton Academy, was awarded $7063 damages by Judge Joseph E. Donovan in municipal court today for injuries suffered while riding in a Boston Elevated bus in Somerville last April.

The bus collided with an automobile, allegedly driven by George Feingold, an attorney, of Clayton street, Malden, at Pearl street and the Northern Artery.

Egan brought two suits for $10,000 each against Feingold and the Boston Elevated Railway. One suit was dismissed.

According to Betram A. Sugerman, counsel for Egan, the latter suffered a "congested heart" and was forced to give up his job at Milton Academy.

WPA Worker Held On Plot Charge

Washington, April 2 (AP)—J. Edgar Hoover said today that federal agents had arrested Alton B. Jacobs, 27-year-old WPA worker, at Glendale, Cal., on charges of attempted extortion.

Hoover, director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, said Jacobs, a former clergyman, had admittedw riting a note threatening "pain of death or worse" to J. E. Barcus of Glendale last Tuesday unless he paid $5000.

5 Pastors Named; Dorchester Post To Fr. Dacey

Appointment of the Rev. William A. Dacey, administrator at Holy Cross Cathedral, as pastor of St. Ambrose's Church, Dorchester, succeeding the late Rev. John H. Harrigan, was announced today for Cardinal O'Connell.

Five appointments were announced, all to become effective next Sunday.

HURLEY WHETS OFFICIAL AXE FOR KANE

Governor Hurley was whetting his executive axe today for the political neck of Associate Public Works Commissioner Frank L. Kane, once assistant secretary to former Governor Curley.

"I'm ready to seek Kane's removal as soon as his counsel, Attorney Francis X. Hurley, is free to protect his interests," the governor said.

Attorney Hurley, former state auditor, was still busy today in behalf of former State Commissioner of Agriculture Howard Haines Murphy, ousted by Governor Hurley with approval of the executive council.

Attorney Hurley said he'd ask a supreme court writ of mandamus to prevent Murphy's successor from taking office or drawing salary, and to prevent Murphy, himself, from being taken off the state payroll.

With the demand for rooms and apartments steadily increasing, discriminating renters will find a choice selection of vacancies in today's classified columns that will meet all their requirements as to price, description and location.

Priest Demands Killer's Release Be Probed

Father Michael J. Dwyer, former Suffolk County assistant district attorney here, who helped subdue a maniac killer at Lathams, N. Y., three days ago, today demanded an official investigation of the man's release from an insane asylum.

Father Dwyer pointed out to New York authorities that John Ireland, who killed his father and wounded his mother and two state troopers, was not only released last December, but was permitted to have a shotgun.

"This may be crying over spilt blood but someone is responsible, other than the man himself," said the priest, who at 76 was not too old to rush from his altar and parley with the armed maniac.

"Either the hospital authorities or those who issued him the license to own and use a double-barreled shotgun should be called to account.

"I hope the matter will be investigated by the proper authorities. There should be greater vigilance in the issuance of firearms permits."

Father Dwyer, formerly a brilliant member of the Boston bar, had long experience with criminal cases as one of the most successful prosecutors in the history of Suffolk County.

The man who was killed in the shooting affray was one of his closest friends. The patricidal killer is now locked up in the Albany County jail, held without bail on a charge of first degre murder.

City Mercy Boat Skipper to Testify

The probe into the crash of the Narrow Gauge line ferryboat Dartmouth and the City Institutions steamer Hibbard Tuesday was to be featured today by testimony from Captain John E. McCarthy of the Hibbard.

DANGER SEEN IN COURT PLAN POWER SHIFT

By WILLIAM K. HUTCHINSON
International News Service Staff Correspondent

Washington, April 2—President Roosevelt's court plan will give Congress power to legislate on child labor, conditions in industry, and control of public education—through a reversal of previous Supreme Court decisions—Walter F. Dodd, a Chicago constitutional lawyer, declared today at the senate hearings.

Dodd warned the plan meant a surrender of individual liberties to the whims of a future Congress. He condemned it as an "usurpation of power by the executive and legislative through a scheme that would destroy all respect for the Supreme Court."

As Dodd took the stand, friends and foes of the presidential plan were arguing over the charge of Senator Burke (D) of Nebraska, that an anticipated new $2,000,000,000 relief fund might be used by the President to influence Congress indirectly on the issue.

INDIGNANT AT CHARGE

This brought a vehement denunciation of the charge from Senator O'Mahoney (D) of Wyoming.

Burke declared it would be an easy thing for the President to use the fund indirectly to bring pressure on senators to vote for his court plan. He pointed out that mayors and governors, if denied funds or fearing small allotments, would urge their senators to vote for the plan in hope of getting larger appropriations.

O'Mahoney denied the President would ever use the fund directly or indirectly to influence Congress. He also denied any member of Congress would be influenced by the funds or their allocation.

Dodd, the day's first witness, was to be followed this afternoon by Canon Anson Phelps Stokes, of Washington Episcopal Cathedral.

Dodd said the President apparently wants broader powers for Congress to govern commerce. If adopted, he warned, there is no limit to the subsequent use of the power as a means of abandoning not only one but all of the present principles upon which our government rests.

LOSE ALL CONTROL

"If we transfer the authority to determine the scope of their political power to the political branches of the government, or subordinate the court to these political branches, we shall in effect abandon any method of keeping the national government within the scope of its granted powers," Dodd said.

"We will have authorized the national government to do all that is now sought by the child labor amendment and to exercise every other governmental power with respect to industry, liquor control, education and other subjects, and we will have conferred this power free from present constitutional guarantees of individual rights."

M'CARL WARNS OF INFLATION

New York, April 2 (US)—Only a balanced Federal budget can keep this country from an "utter exhaustion of national credit—even bankruptcy — riotous inflation, another crash—or worse."

This warning was sounded here by John Raymond McCarl, former comptroller general of the United States, in a speech before the monthly meeting of the Chamber of Commerce of the State of New York. He read a prepared speech on "the President's program for administrative management."

Throughout his long address he attacked the plans for taking powers from Congress and giving them to the President. He deplored the fact that he could find nothing "to enthuse about" in the report of the President's committee on management.

He declared that if the proposed centralization of power in the White House were to take place it would require a man of "supernatural wisdom, fortitude and unselfishness" to handle the job.

The "Golden Fleece" -1937 version!

BACK in the misty days of history, a chap named Jason set sail to capture the most prized trophy of his time—"The Golden Fleece". To hi-jack this 14-carat bit of sheep's wool, he spent more money than Washington needs to balance the budget. It was quite a party.

Today, history is repeating itself. Again, Sheep is King! Wool—the staple white kind—is back on a "Golden Fleece" basis. And is almost as hard to get. Fabric costs are up. Everything that goes into the making of clothes is up. And most retail prices are up!

But all this excitement has so far cost Bond customers not one cent extra. True, we spent more for Spring woolens. But not so much more that we have to ask you to pay more. Our volume can take care of that. And we propose to hold to this policy as long as we can. Right now, it is reaping rich rewards for both of us. We don't raise prices—and we make a lot of new friends. You don't have to pay more for your clothes—and you save money!

This 1937 version of the "Golden Fleece" is writing a new chapter in clothing history. It is the most important step toward giving you better value—more for your money—in our 29 years of business. Cash-in on it, when you buy your Spring outfit!

Chrysler Parley Deferred

General Motors Seeks New Peace

Detroit, April 2 (AP)—Resumption of strike settlement negotiations between Walter P. Chrysler and John L. Lewis was deferred today until Saturday while efforts to settle new disputes in General Motors plants were intensified.

William S. Knudson, executive vice-president of General Motors, and Homer Martin, president of the United Automobile Workers, prepared to confer today in an attempt to quiet storms that beat about the GM-UAWA agreement, reached three week sago.

A series of sit-down strikes, described by union leaders as spontaneous and unauthoriezd, cloed all nine plants of the Chevrolet Motor Company at Flint, Mich., today.

Approximately 15,0000 General Motors workers were idle in Flint as union leaders prevailed upon sit-downers to leave the Fisher Body plant and two plants of the Yellow Truck and Coach Manufacturing Company. At Pontiac, Mich., settlements also had been announced of strikes begun yesterday in two Chevrolet departments at Flint, but those peace moves were off-set by new strikes that closed the entire factory.

RIFT OVER PACT

There were some indications the rank and file of the UAWA membership was dissatisfied with the provisions of the agreement which set forth procedure to be followed in collective bargaining and in dealing with employe grievances.

Union officials contended the strikes were spontaneous protests by the workers against the refusal of plant foremen to recognize shop stewards. The company contended the strikes were clear violations of the agreement, which provided that there should be no interruption of work until all other methods of settlement had been exhausted, and no strikes without authorizzation of the international officials. They insisted the company had adhered scrupulously to the agreement.

The Chevrolet strikers congregated in plant No. 4, the motor assembly department which is a key plant for all Chevrolet operations. Between 400 and 500 men were occupying that plant with handfuls of pickets at the various gates.

DELAY CHRYSLER PARLEY

Governor Frank Murphy announced the postponement of the Chrysler-Lewis conference before he left Detroit forL ansing today. He explained that Lewis had been detained in the east by negotiations between his United Mine Workers and the bituminous coal operators. Chrysler was reported to be engaged with company affairs.

Despite the settlements in Pontiac, approximately 108,000 autoomobile workers were idle. Sixty thousand of them were employed in the strike-bound Chrysler plants; 20,000 by the Briggs Manufacturing Company; 14,750 in the Flint Chevrolet plants; 1100 in Fisher plan No. 2 at Flint; 10,000 in the strike-bound Hudson Motor Car Company plant in Detroit, and 2200 in the struew Reo Motor Car Company plant at Lansing.

Labor troubles confronted General Motors of Canada also. A meeting between the management and the U. A. W. A. to avert a threatened strike in its plant at Oshawa, Ont., was called today in the office of David A. Croll, Ontario minister of labor, at Toronto.

The United Automobile Workers announced the local managements of the Yellow Truck and Fisher plants at Pontiac had agreed to abide by any understanding on employe representation reached at the conference between Martin and Knudsen at Detroit.

The union said the Yellow Truck management also had agreed to minimum wage scales of 75 cents an hour for men and 65 cents for women after six months of employment, and had consented to meet once a week with a committee of employes on grievances, or at any time an emergency arose.

The Pontiac Fisher plant management, the union, agreed to negotiate on complaints of speeding up the assembly line and to make "mutually satisfactory" adjustments of complaints that some jobs were inadequately manned.

'Sit' Queries Parried by President

Washington, April 2 (INS)—President Roosevelt again today declined to be drawn into a discussion of the sit-down strike technique.

At his press conference, he shook his head or waved away questions on this subject.

462,000 MINERS STRIKE, PARLEY DEADLOCKED

The strike is the largest and most far-flung the country has witnessed since the U. M. W. struck for one week in September, 1935. Miners in a score of states scattered from central Pennsylvania westward to the state of Washington and southward to Alabama are effected.

The old contract expired at midnight, March 31, and without a new agreement not a wheel turned. Technically the strike started yesterday but the mines were idle as the anniversary of the eight-hour day was observed.

As the miners celebrated, the man they honored—John L. Lewis, bushy-browed president of the U. M. W., one of the largest and most powerful labor organizations in the country—sat with other negotiators in a conference room here attempting to reach an accord.

Two sessions, one last night, failed to bring a settlement of differences and finally the negotiators called it a day, to meet again at 1:30 p. m. (E. S. T.) today.

Lewis said the operators had asked for "more time."

"Evidently they want to think it over," he added.

COMPROMISES MADE

The miners originally demanded wage increases averaging 15 per cent, a cut in the work week from 35 to 30 hours, two weeks' vacation with pay and a guarantee of 200 days' work each year.

The operators originally sought an increase in the work week from 35 to 40 hours, with no change in pay rates.

After conferences nearly every day since the negotiations started, the miners by yesterday had reduced their demands to the following:

An increase of 50 cents in the basic daily wage, $5.50 in the North and $5.10 in the South under the old agreement; an increase of 9 cents in the combined cutting and loading rate for miners paid by the ton; an increase of 70 cents for operators of loading machines and an increase of 10 per cent for yardage and deadwork (removal of rock, etc.), with time and one-half for all overtime.

Some operators said these rates were out of proportion, but the voiced opposition to the increases was scarcely heard in the roar of protest against the overtime proposal.

Some operators were willing to meet the demands but the union would not allow any miners where workers carried U. M. W. cards to work until the entire industry signed a new agreement.

With the exception of the members of the Progressive Miners of America in Illinois, most of the bituminous mines are affected by the Appalachian agreement, as the contract the conferees have been attempting to negotiate is known.

Sloan Sees Economic Dictatorship in CIO

New York, April 2 (INS)—In an attack upon the Committee for Industrial Organization, Alfred P. Sloan, Jr., president of the General Motors Corporation, declared today in a statement to stockholders that domination of labor by the CIO would be a step toward "economic political dictatorship."

He charged that in its efforts to organize General Motors workers, the CIO was inaugurating a campaign aimed eventually at getting control of all employes in mass-production industries and the establishment of the check-off system for collection of union dues.

Sloan declared that the sit-down strike is "revolutionary in its dangers and implications" and should be dealt with under the law "just as aggressively as all other offenses in which the safety and welfare of the community are involved."

Fight CIO in Maine

12 Union Leaders Held for Trial

Striking back at John L. Lewis, who is directing a drive to bring New England workers under his CIO banners, Maine authorities today charged 20 persons prominently connected with his union with conspiracy to keep shoe factory employes from work by violence, threats and intimidation.

In district court at Lewiston, Me., 12 of the accused—including two women—were arraigned and released under $1000 bail each, for a hearing next Friday. They pleaded not guilty.

The others accused have not been served with summonses, most of them having been transferred by Lewis to other fields.

One of those not yet served is Joseph Salerno, who is one of three men appointed by Lewis to organize the nation's 1,250,000 textile operatives.

FIRST CIO TEST

This is the first test of its kind the CIO has faced. Most of those accused are organizers from Massachusetts, active in the shoe strike in Auburn and Lewiston, now in its ninth day.

The authorities of the twin cities contend a majority of the shoeworkers do not want CIO interference. Unperturbed, the Lewis agents continued their activities and also began a drive to organize the 6000 Lewiston textile workers.

Today's court charges are based on affidavits of four employes of the Cushman shoe factory in Auburn who said they were coerced into joining the union.

Those arraigned today were William J. Markey of Lynn, chief organizer for the CIO in the Lewiston-Auburn strike; William B. Mahan of Lynn, member of the New England CIO shoe organizing committee; Ernest Henry of North Saugus, business agent for the Lynn lasters' union; Miss Mary Dauphine, of Lynn, member of the shoe organizing committee; Benjamin J. Arena of Lewiston, attorney for the CIO in Maine.

BOSTON WOMAN HELD

Also Miss Nina Reger of Boston, Paul Salvaggio of East Boston, William E. Thornton of Swampscott, Martin J. Lawless of Peabody, George Kandor of Chelsea and Maurice Filteau and Lucien Bontain, Lewiston shoe workers.

A special session of the Androscoggin County grand jury will be called if probable cause is found by Judge Alton A. Lessard next week, according to Frank T. Powers, special prosecutor.

In Lowell the night shift at Ingham Worster Company, numbering 35 workers, went on strike for a 10 per cent wage increase. The day shift continued at work. About 100 employes of the Lowell Shuttle Company complained to CIO headquarters they were locked out.

A CIO strike in the jewelry industry, which centers around Attleboro, was threatened today, as members of the International Association of Machinists met at Providence, R. I., to take a vote on a proposed walkout. Die-cutters and tool-makers in this industry want from $1.10 to $1.25 an hour, which the employers are said to have refused.

FUEL STRIKE ENDS

Most of Greater Boston's fuel truck drivers and helpers were back at work today, the employes of all the large companies having accepted a compromise.

After two days without boat service, the islands of Nantucket and Martha's Vineyard were being supplied with food and other necessities by airplanes, tugs and fishing smacks, while 40 seamen employed by the steamboat company continued a strike for increased wages and shorter hours.

More wage increases have been granted by New England mills, some voluntarily and others in settlement with CIO representatives.

Rhode Island saw another sitdown strike starting, this one in the rubber industry when 400 employes at the Phillips-Baker Company locked themselves in the mill with a five-piece orchestra to help pass the time.

Jacob Blume of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America, stated today that there was no strike at the M. S. Kondagian factory in Watertown, but that the employes simply met to discuss the trasfer of a girl from one department to another, against the wish of the union.

NAVY SCORED AS LABOR FOE

Washington, April 2 (AP)—John Green, president of the Industrial nion of Marine and Shipbuilding workers, told a House labor sub-committee today "the Navy Department has been instrumental in aiding some ship yards in preventing our organizations in the yards."

Green charged shipbuilding companies with "inequities" in carrying out government contracts. He urged the committee to approve a bill authorizing a labor department investigation of the industry. He said the union sought to "protect Uncle Sam," and would prove his charges in an investigation.

Green said "some subordinates" in the Navy Department had "cast reflections on our organization."

Green said the union had appealed in vain to the Navy Department for aid in settling labor disputes.

H. G. Smith, national counsel for the American Ship Builders, opposed the bill on the ground the information sought was already being obtained by the Bureau of Labor Statistics.

40-Hour Textile Week Sought at World Parley

Washington, April 2 (AP)—Labor delegates to the World Textile Conference, opening today, called for an international agreement to limit the industry's work week to 40 hours.

Emil Rieve of Philadelphia, president of the American Federation of Hosiery Workers and the United States workers' delegate, said action on this proposal would be labor's biggest interest in the two-week sessions.

Thomas Ashurst, British employers' delegate and chairman of the International Employers' Group, declined to express an opinion on the shorter work week proposal stride.

Ashurst said he had not had an opportunity to sound out sentiment of the employers' group and did not expect a definite trend of opinion until Monday.

Rieve, appointed chairman of the employes' group, said he expected some opposition from Japan and England on the 40-hour proposal. He pointed out that aside from the United States, it was in operation only in France and Belgium.

Tanker Wrecked, Man Dies in Blast

Norfolk, Va., April 2 (INS)—Captain T. H. Russell of the Gulf Oil Company's tanker Gulf Lass was killed and another man was injured today by an explosion that wrecked the ship.

The craft was tied to her dock when the explosion rocked surrounding streets. Cause of the blast was not immediately learned.

Senator Robinson Tries to Sidetrack 'Sit' Declaration

Washington, April 2 (INS)—A move to sidetrack a Senate declaration of policy on the sit-down strike was launched in the Senate today by Senator Robinson (D.) of Arkansas, majority leader.

Robinson sought to send to the interstate commerce committee an amendment to the Guffey coal bill which would outlaw the sit-down strike in the soft coal industry. It was introduced by Senators Byrnes (D.) of South Carolina.

Robinson's move brought Senator McNary (R) of Oregon, binority leader, to his feet. He said that such a move, ineffect, would kill the Byrnes amendment.

Vice-president Garner interjected:

"The Senate at any time can take up this or any other resolution by a majority vote."

Senator Borah (R.) of Idaho declared the federal government is without power to abolish the sit-down strike, and that the sole authority to deal with this situation is the states.

'SIT' CRIPPLES DETROIT HOTEL

Detroit, April 2 (AP)—The 27-story Book-Cadillac Hotel, Detroit's largest, remained without service today with approximately 350 employes on strike.

The strike started yesterday afternoon as a sit-down, but the employes left peacefully when 400 policemen massed at the hotel under orders of Mayor Frank Couzens to clear the hotel of strikers "by force, if necessary."

Peace conferences began immediately between union leaders and Alex J. Groesbeck, former Governor of Michigan, who said he believed the strike would be settled by noon today.

The Book-Cadillac management announced last night that 300 guests had checked out, but 622 remained, in addition to 125 permanent guests.

Pinned 4 Hours Beside Dead Man

Everett, Fash., April 2 (AP)—Paul Lux, 35, told today of the four long hours he was pinioned beside the crushed body of Everett Quick, 30, yesterday, when a gigantic stump gave way from its precarious perch on a creek bank and fell on them, killing his companion.

84-Hour Week for Japan

Tokyo, April 2 (AP)—A bill to make an 84-hour work week universal in Japanese industry as a means of improving national health was drafted today by the home ministry. A 15-hour day has been usual during the present boom in the munitions industry.

POLICE GUARD R. I. HOUSE TO BLOCK RIOT

Providence, R. I., April 2—A large detachment of state police was placed on guard at the State House today by Gov. Robert E. Quinn to prevent a recurrence of yesterday's rioting in the House of Representatives.

Other officers were detailed to guard Walter Sepe, deputy speaker of the House, whom Rpublicans and Pawtucket Democrats refuse to recognize.

GROUPS IN OPPOSITION

Combining against Governor Quinn's Democratic followers, the Republican members with the McCoy Democrats from Pawtucket appeared to be in control of the House.

The violent outburst, which was quelled yesterday only after Providence and state police were dispatched to augment a large squad of sheriff's deputies, occurred over the Mulligan bill, which would take control of the Pawtucket fire, police and public works departments out of the hands of Mayor Thomas P. McCoy.

REGULAR SPEAKER ILL

A bare majority of the House members contend they have elected William MacLeod of Newport, a Republican, deputy speaker in place of Sepe and in place of the regular speaker, James H. Kiernan, who is ill.

The Mulligan bill was torn in half yesterday amid a wild scramble which threw women spectators into hysterics. Seventy officers were sent to restore order.

The Pawtucket measure would not ordinarily come up again until next week, but an attempt to rush it through was expected today.

Quiz Man in Death Of Mother of Nine

Baltimore, April 2 (US)—Rushed to Baltimore by order of Governor Nice, a man identified as Irvin Howard, of Solley, Maryland, was held in the city jail here for questioning in connection with the mysterious slaying of Mrs. Mary Gunther, 59, mother of nine children.

Norway Woman Envoy

Mrs. J. B. Harriman Slated for Post

Washington, April 2 (AP)—President Roosevelt today indicated he intends to appoint Mrs. J. Borden Harriman, New York and Washington society woman, minister to Norway.

MRS. HARRIMAN

By an indirect answer to a question concerning such an appointment, the chief executive gave the impression that he already had asked the formal consent of the Norwegian Government to name Mrs. Harriman, who is a member of the Democratic National Committee for the District of Columbia and was an active worker in the last presidential election.

Mrs. Harriman, if she is appointed, would succeed Anthony J. Drexel Biddle, Jr., of Philadelphia, who is reported to be under consideration for another diplomatic post.

Mrs. Harriman would be the United States' second woman envoy. The first was Mrs. Ruth Bryan Owen, daughter of the late William Jennings Bryan, who resigned as minister to Denmark last September after her marriage to a captain in the Danish Royal Life Guards.

Mrs. Harriman is the widow of a noted New York banker who died in 1914.

INLAND ROUTE OPPOSED

Unanimous opposition to a proposed inland waterway from Montreal to New York went into the record at a two-day hearing, concluded at the federal building today, before an international joint commission representing the United States and Canada.

After Frank S. Davis, manager of the Maritime Association of the Boston Chamber of Commerce, had reviewed testimony of "overwhelming sentiment against the project in New England," the commission adjourned hearings to April 6 and 7 in Washington.

None of the many witnesses, including representatives of shipping interests, railroads, labor and business organizations, favored the proposed inland route, known as the Lake Champlain cut-off.

5-Day Bride Hunts Wealthy Truant

Hide-Seek Antics Baffle Searchers

MRS. NAN BRILL

Hollywood, April 2 (AP) Twice wed Mrs. Nan Pierson Brooks Macy Brill of New York society was bewildered today over "this hide-and-seek" with the millionaire she married five days ago but hasn't seen for the last four.

She appealed to police to find her husband, William Hunsaker Brill, wealthy sportsman. They reported they found him—but he got in his car and drove away.

Said Mrs. Brooks

"He telephoned last night at 9 o'clock and told me to 'Sit tight.' If it's all an April fool joke, this hide-and-seek, then I hope it's funny to someone. It's not to me

"There are lovely wedding gifts and messages arriving here from friends in the East. They're really quite embarrassing in the present situation

"I don't understand what has happened But whatever it is, I know Bill and I love each other, nevertheless."

Mrs Brill is the daughter of William Earl Brooks, steel executive, and Mrs. Jewell Brooks, New York society figure. Her first husband was George Henry Macy, New York wholesale tea merchant. They were divorced three years ago

Climaxing a three-months courtship, the 25-year-old man-about-town made such a hurried trip that a 10-cent ring served for the ceremony. However, the bride assured, Brill replaced it "with something more appropriate" the next day.

KEEPS TELEPHONING WIFE

Then, she said, he left her in a hotel, promising to rejoin her at dinner that night

"I haven't seen Bill, in person, since Tuesday, but he keeps telephoning, apologizing for breaking our appointments, and saying he loves me very much indeed," she said.

Last night she appealed to police to find him. Two detectives, J. L. Dwight and J. A. Page, said they located him in an apartment building penthouse, but he drove away in an automobile with the parting statement:

"I most assuredly am a missing person."

"I don't understand what is keeping Bill from me, for I know he loves me," she said after police reported results of their quest.

"There was no quarrel. His parents, Dr. and Mrs. William Brill, have been perfectly charming to me They say they haven't seen him, either."

Woman Phones Tip That Traps N. H. Holdup Suspect

To the keen eyes of a woman fingerprint expert at State police headquarters Cambridge police gave credit today for the seizure of Henry Baker 33, sought for six months since his indictment for theft of a $10,000 payroll at Rochester, N. H., last October.

Catherine MacKinnon 26-year-[illegible] [illegible] and friend of Baker was sentenced to [illegible] three to five years in New Hampshire State Prison for participation in the holdup.

"There is someone you'd like to get sitting in a car now at Massachusetts avenue and Linden street," a voice told Chief Inspector James J. Shea of the Cambridge police, over the telephone.

Shea and two officers went to the intersection and arrested Baker and Thomas Galligan, 30, of Whittier street, Cambridge, as they sat in a car In the car they found a number of nickel and dime telephone slugs.

In Baker's room they found more [illegible] correspondence with the MacKinnon girl. Baker at first denied his identity but admitted it after a fingerprint check [illegible] description of the man's prints, Mrs. Isabel Carroll quickly thumbed files at state police headquarters and returned with the important news the suspect was not the Henry Banning he claimed, but Henry Baker.

Opera Season Premiere Attended By Fashionable Set

By BETTY ALDEN

"THE OLD ORDER CHANGETH" . . . but the Boston Opera House is one of the few buildings of its kind which has successfully stood the onslaught of time . . . Practically every city and town in the country has its opera house . . . a relic of the halcyon days of the stage, when the one night stands of minstrel shows, Gilbert and Sullivan operettas, Uncle Tom's Cabin and Broadway productions gave the populous its only glimpses into the world of bright lights and music which now holds forth in millions of movies . . .

MRS. ROBERT FAXON

Most of these "opera houses" bear the mark of better days in threadbare dignity, as they house political rallies, wrestling matches, movies, roller skating rinks or dance marathons . . . But the Boston Opera House has been spared a similar fate . . .

All season round it is still occupied by New York shows playing two and three week runs . . . but at least once a year Cinderella's Fairy Godmother arrives to wave her magic wand and suddenly the sober gilded boxes become the diamond horseshoe, sparkling with the glitter of jewels and silks and satins, as society turns out to attend the opera . . .

This year the spell lasts ten days . . . beginning last evening with the majestic performance of "Tristan und Isolde" by members of the Metropolitan Opera Company . . .

Practically all of Boston's socialites were present . . . and we are glad to see that a large number of them are adhering to the old formalities of the so-called Golden Era, when women wore their most lavish gowns at the Opera, and jewels which were seldom seen on any other occasion . . . and when a woman was considered almost shameless if she appeared without long white kid gloves . . .

* * *

MRS. WILLIAM C. COX set off her deep tan acquired at Palm Beach, with a beautiful white gown with a short white cape edged with white fox hugged around her . . . she wore long white gloves and several diamond bracelets over them . . . In the box with Mrs. Cox and her mother were Mr. and Mrs. Allen McIntyre, the latter in a white gown with lavender orchids on her shoulder . . .

Mrs. Richard C. Storey, who attended with a crowd of young friends she and Mr. Storey had entertained at dinner beforehand, was in a bouffant blue taffeta gown trimmed with large circle of diamonds . . . She wore short white gloves with diamond bracelets . . . In her box was Mrs. Frederic C. Dearborn whose blonde hair was wreathed with a small coronet of violets the exact color of her gown . . .

Mrs. Stephen Van R. Crosby's ruby and diamond necklace was the cynosure of all eyes . . . It is very long and was set off to the best advantage by her gown of ruby satin . . . Her daughter, Mrs. Katharine Crosby Choate chose her gown to compliment her turquoise necklace and earrings . . . the dress itself was sheer black net, with little clusters of turquoise feathers all over it, a turquoise belt and gloves, and a purse studded with turquoise stones . . . Mrs. Francis P. Sears, who attended with her daughter, Sally, wore a striking gown of navy blue satin, with a train faced with coral, and a short tight-fitting jacket faced with coral, which precluded the necessity of a wrap for the hop, skip and jump from her limousine to the lobby . . .

Since "Tristan und Isolde" is the most romantic of the Wagnerian operas, there were any number of engaged couples hearing it together . . . Priscilla Dennett, in pale blue which set off her sapphire and diamond bracelets, was with her future husband, Johnny Goodrich, and his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Wallace Goodrich . . . Marjorie Osgood, in burgundy velvet with orchids and sweet peas on her shoulder, promenaded with her bridegroom-to-be, Larry Ross . . .

Mrs. Bartlett Harwood's lavender satin gown was faced with violet to match her slippers, and her back and shoulders were bare so everyone could envy the deep coppery tan she just acquired in Jamaica . . . She is another helping to keep alive the old formality of wearing long white kid gloves to the opera . . . Mrs. Robert M. Faxon wore them with her brick red satin gown, and had a cluster of gardenias in her hair . . . Charlotte Rantoul's black velvet ensemble had a three-quarter jacket edged with white fur, and her hair was adorned with a gold and brilliant tiara . . .

Pale Blue Popular in New Gowns

MRS. ARTHUR PEARSON and Miss Nella Pearson, two of the long list of guarantors, had a guest from New York with them . . . and others attending in large parties were Mr. and Mrs. H. Wendell Endicott (Mr. Endicott is president of the Boston Opera Association) with their daughter, Mrs. John Draper Gannett, Mrs. John S. Ames and Becky Ames . . . Mrs. Endicott's gown of sheer black lace had a wide hem of coral chiffon and she carried a fetching little hanky of the same bright hue . . .

In one section of the Golden Horseshoe, pale blue predominated in the color of the ladies' gowns . . . Mrs. Christian Herter, Mrs. Charles Shea, Mrs. Malcolm Bradley French and Mrs. Hugh Bancroft all wore this shade, each with her own particularly lovely jewels sparkling and glistening when the lights were up . . . Next to them, Mrs. Ernest B. Dane, Jr.'s scarlet taffeta was a brilliant contrast, and Polly Wardwell's emerald green satin stood out as she milled through the throng into the refreshment room . . .

Among the hundreds of other socialites we noted were Mrs. Henry Pratt McKean, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Sumner Bird, Mrs William Gaston with her granddaughter, Miss Ann Howard, Miss Ellen Bullard, Rosamond Lockwood with her mother, Mrs. H. De Forest Lockwood, John Roosevelt with Patricia Preston, Dorothy Preston and Nathaniel Clark, Mrs. Edwin S. Webster in a sumptuous ermine wrap over black satin, Mrs. Joel M Barnes with Mrs. Frank Stewart and Mrs. Lawrence Black, Mrs. Roger Wolcott in a black satin gown faced around the hem with scarlet, and a deep fur cape, Mary Pentecost with her fiance, Jackson Turner, Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Bundy and Mrs. John Gardner Coolidge, 3d . . .

BARBARA BREMER, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. Lewis Bremer of Marlborough street, was escorted to the brilliant opera opening last evening by David Crockett, also of Marlborough street. She wore a deep raspberry color maribou cape with a gardenia corsage over a pale pink satin gown, and Mr. Crockett was turned out in correct formal attire from the top of his "top hat" to the tip of his pumps.

MRS. FRANCIS P. SEARS of Mt. Vernon street with her daughter, Sally Sears, as they arrived at the Opera House for the opening of the Metropolitan Opera's ten-day season here. Mrs. Sears wore a gown of navy blue satin faced with coral and her daughter was in a black velvet gown with a white fur wrap. Sally is a sub-debutante.

ISABEL GARDINER and her fiance, Royall Victor, Jr., who are tentatively planning a June wedding. Miss Gardiner is the daughter of Mrs. Foster Gardiner of Brookline and Mr. Victor is the son of Mrs. Royall Victor of Long Island. They were photographed as they arrived at the Boston Opera House for the opening performance of the Metropolitan stars.

Ceremony In London

Of interest to Boston society is the wedding of Mary Bischoff daughter of Mrs. Charles Bischoff of London England, and the late Mr. Bischoff, to Carroll L. Wilson of Rochester, N. Y. The Reverend R. E. Sadlier performed the ceremony in the Chelsea Old Church in London, yesterday afternoon. A reception at the home of the bride's mother, followed. Edward Bischoff gave his sister in marriage.

The bride wore a period gown of ivory satin, made with a high collar, fitted waist and full sleeves. Her veil of old Irish lace and tulle fell from a wreath of orange blossoms to combine with the long satin train. She carried a bouquet of spring flowers.

Miss Frances Bischoff, who was her sister's maid of honor and the bridesmaids, Elizabeth Wainwright of Newton Center and Miss Kate and Miss Elizabeth Greene of London, were costumed alike in dresses of old ivory silk.

Following an automobile trip through England, Mr. and Mrs. Wilson will return to this country aboard the Normandie and will make their home at 85 Strathmore road in Brookline.

Flagstad, Melchior Superb in Opera

By RUTH MARSTERS

The Boston Opera House was again the scene of [illegible] able occasion as the Metropolitan Opera Association opened its fortnight season here with last evening's presentation of "Tristan und Isolde."

The tremendous vogue which this opera enjoys in this country at the moment is generally attributed to the superb performances brought to the title roles by Kirsten Flagstad and Lauritz Melchior.

It is true that the demands made upon the artists in the performance of Wagner's [illegible] music are such that few are equipped to recreate it in all its beauty and power.

Flagstad and Melchior are without doubt among the few. The heroic proportions they attained in the music of the third act would be sufficient to establish this fact without their already historic background of achievement.

LAST INSPIRED

Their performances in the earlier part of the opera, however, were less inspired.

The impassioned scene leading up to and following the drinking of the love potion in the first act, the great love duet in the second act were outwardly convincing enough. But one felt neither the overpowering conflict of emotion in the first nor the ultimate mystic content of the second.

However, from the beginning of the third act Melchior became completely absorbed in his role, setting forth all the pathos and frenzy of [illegible] dying moments with the utmost dramatic intensity.

VOCAL MAGNIFICENCE

Flagstad brought the whole to its climax with a performance of the Liebestod which for sheer vocal magnificence can rarely have been equalled.

That the orchestra has vastly improved during the past season was evidenced from the outset.

In conductor Artur Bodansky's capable hands its performance was significant [illegible]

So much of the strength of this opera is vested in the orchestral score [illegible] the [illegible] of tone [illegible] of a great [illegible] organization's performance.

BEATEN PAIR FACE LINEUP

Their faces puffed and patched from a severe beating administered by a mob attracted by the holdup of a liquor store at 195 L street, South Boston, two youths faced a lineup at police headquarters today.

Their arrests were preceded by a wild bottle-throwing fight with the store proprietor, Charles J. Stravin, who sounded the alarm that brought a crowd on their heels.

According to police, the youths walked into Stravin's store with hands in pockets to give the impression they carried guns and told him "this is a holdup. Fork over the cash."

When they told Stravin he could [illegible] hands, the proprietor [illegible] he pressed a buzzer connected with the L Street Tavern next [illegible] installed after a previous holdup.

One of the bandits saw him press the button and [illegible] a bottle of liquor at him, cutting his head. Stravin seized several bottles and threw them at the youths. In a few seconds bottles were flying back and forth, some of them connecting with the bandits.

Someone had put in a police riot call and when a squad of officers arrived they found one youth unconscious [illegible] still being beaten, and the other [illegible] the tavern [illegible] weakly trying to ward off several men.

Ten-Ounce Baby On 3d Day of Life

Albia, Ia., April 2 (AP)—A baby boy weighing less than a pound entered his third day of life today on a diet of whiskey and milk.

The [illegible] born to Mr. and Mrs. Henry Johnston (the mother 18) took the nourishment—one drop of whiskey and a teaspoon of milk—from an eye dropper every hour.

No one knows how much he actually weighs because the attending physician's scales do not register less than a pound. The physician, Dr. R. A. Smith, estimated 10 ounces and said the child was otherwise normal.

THEY HALT "INDISCRETION"

London, April 2 (INS)—A suggestion by King George VI that he and Queen Elizabeth visit the flooded areas of Lincolnshire was "abruptly and almost rudely squashed" by his Old Guard advisors, "The Week," a privately circulated periodical on current affairs, said today.

The publication stated the King's advisors were "terrified lest His Majesty commit some 'Edward-like' indiscretion which might prove [illegible] in marring his reign."

Official [illegible] in dissuading the King were that the trip might affect his health, said "The Week," but it added that it was apparent the Old Guard advisors were determined King George should confine his activities to the purely social sphere, thus obviating possibility of another "South Wales scandal."

NAZI PRESS IN NEW BLAST AT LAGUARDIA

Berlin, April 2 (INS)—Mayor Fiorello H. LaGuardia of New York city today was the object of renewed attacks in Germany's militant press.

A German news agency in a dispatch from New York said "two firms had to transfer their business to other cities because of gangsters and racketeering."

The agency distributed the story under this headline:

The report to which the German news agency referred was submitted by New York City Controller Frank J. Taylor. It contended 140 [illegible] starting [illegible] had been driven from New York by racketeering in business and labor.

Mayor LaGuardia attacked the report and denied that [illegible] had been driven from the city by lawless groups. He said:

"Some politicians have been trying to take comfort from making it appear we have racketeers here. I say now those who talk about it are experts, owing to the close association which existed between politicians and racketeers prior to Jan. 1, 1934. We have given racketeers no comfort since 1934, and none will be given to them."

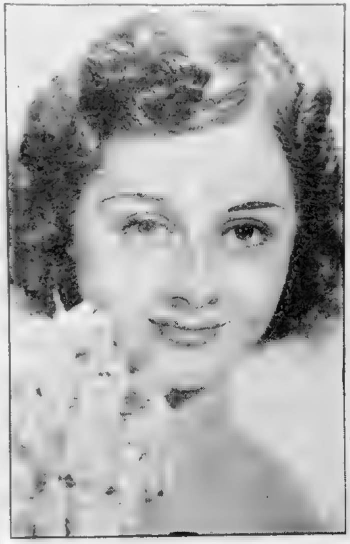
Coloring Pencil Banishes Grey Hair



POSED BY ELEANORE WHITNEY

Harmless Affair Also Gives Life and Sheen To Faded Tresses

By ARLINE GOULD

IN an imperfect world, it isn't always easy to find perfection—not even in cosmetics.

A hair dye that will keep tresses looking young forever, has not yet been evolved. Science may some time find a permanent way to banish grey hair, but don't wager your last dime that such a day is right around the corner.

This being essentially the age of youth, it isn't surprising, however, that grey or faded hair should be more or less in disrepute.

If you are a woman who simply cannot reconcile yourself to the first gray hairs, or the ones that come later, you will be glad to know about a brand-new hair coloring idea.

Made of a vegetable compound, it is a most harmless affair and [illegible] soap. [illegible] no circumstances can it be considered a bleach or a dye, and is washed off when you shampoo your hair with soap and water.

It is the simplest thing in the world to apply. Just moisten hair or pencil, apply directly to the hair, and watch the gray streaks disappear.

It actually seems to give a certain amount of life and sheen to faded locks too and can even be used on the eyebrows as you would mascara.

It comes in a variety of shades, so all you have to do is to match up your particular shade. Of course, it isn't permanent, but it is so easy to apply and so inexpensive in price that you really don't care.

And no matter how often you apply it, you have the assurance that it isn't robbing your scalp of its own natural oils or turning your hair into multicolored wisps of hay.

It is the modern way to banish gray hair (particularly those first annoying ones which appear at temples and along the cheek line) and is as easy to use as a lipstick.

It is even suggested that men may apply it to their mustaches. The pencil is priced at only fifty cents and it will pay for itself [illegible] never want to be without it.

To learn the name of this new hair coloring pencil, which is exclusive with one store in Boston, call Arline Gould [illegible] or write to her at the Boston Evening American, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Home Mending

How many shoestrings balk at the critical morning rush hour, when the children are struggling to dress themselves.

It is easy to mend the rumpled shoestring ends, after the metal tips have come off. Trim off the frayed section, dip the end in a bottle of glue, then twist and let it dry.

This simple trick will avoid the purchase of many extra pairs of shoestrings.

Navy and White

NOTHING approaches the [illegible] the young spirit of navy blue puritanically trimmed with white. Particularly pretty is a navy marquisette redingote frock mounted with bands of taffeta and trimmed with a ruff of white lace. Twin bows of embroidered white organdy are posed at the low neckline of a new navy sheer, set off by a shallow toque covered with velvet violets.

Good Manners

WEDDING GIFT?

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN: My husband and I received a marriage announcement about a week ago of a wedding that took place before the holidays. We are wondering if it is proper to send a gift. My husband has worked with this man for several years, although they are not intimate friends. S.

It is proper for you and your husband to send a gift if you wish. But from what you tell me, it would not be especially necessary for you to send a gift.

In the first place, a wedding announcement does not so much suggest a gift as a wedding invitation does. And in the second place, the groom, as you say, is not a special friend of your husband's.

However, both of these reasons would not stand in your way, of course, if you and your husband feel that you would like to make this generous bow to your husband's co-worker and his bride.

Disorders of Endocrine Glands

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.

WE often hear about the endocrine or "ductless" glands. Yet, I wonder how many are familiar with the nature of these vital structures.

Within the past quarter of a century, science has come to distinguish between the so-called ductless glands and the other glands.

Some glands have ducts or outward passageways, while others do not. For example, the salivary gland has a duct or tube leading into the mouth [illegible] away from the gland.

But the endocrine glands have no ducts or canals. They discharge their secretions directly into the circulating blood.

A ductless gland carries in its secretions a substance or agent known as hormones. When these reach the blood stream, they produce certain reactions.

For example, the hormone of the thyroid gland, located in the front of the neck, is concerned with the physical and mental development of the individual.

The pancreas, another ductless gland, supplies a substance known as "insulin," which is essential to the body in handling certain food substances.

OTHER GLANDS

Other ductless glands are the parathyroids, suprarenals, the pituitary, the thymus and the pineal. There are other glands in the body that secrete substances appearing to have important effects similar to those we have discussed but as yet, little is known about them.

Disturbances of the ductless glands produce trouble of one sort or another. For example, a lack of insulin from the failure of the pancreas to produce it leads to diabetes.

It will be seen that any disturbance of an endocrine gland will disturb one or another function of the body. These glands are definitely related to the general well being.

Fortunately, it is possible now to do something worthwhile in overcoming these disturbances. By the administration of extracts obtained from similar glands in a lower animal, the human animal may be benefited.

ARMY Day in N. E. SET

PARADES ARE BIG FEATURE

New England [illegible] with the rest of the nation [illegible] army posts [illegible] to be the greatest observance of Army Day next Tuesday.

[illegible] President [illegible] to observe the [illegible] anniversary of [illegible] World War [illegible] organizations [illegible] celebration.

Originated in 1927 by [illegible] of the Military Order of the World War, a patriotic group of veterans who served as commissioned officers with the United States forces during the World War, Army Day this year [illegible] was announced. [illegible] have been ordered to cooperate [illegible] bodies [illegible] ceremonies.

Colorful Parade

[illegible] parade and [illegible] separate [illegible] have been planned [illegible] Major General Fox Conner, commanding the First Corps Area, has ordered the posts under his command to cooperate with civic organizations [illegible] the day.

Fort Williams in Portland, Me., will be the scene of a dinner and dance sponsored by the Harold T. Andrews Post, American Legion, of Portland.

Army officers and locally prominent civilians will speak on the significance of the day. All but the most necessary activities will be suspended and the post will be thrown open for the inspection of the public.

Posts that have not been asked to participate in any special program will observe the day with [illegible] ceremonies [illegible] open house, Major General Conner announced.

Double Import

A double significance has been attached to Army Day. Mainly the observance is to honor the thousands of soldier dead who gave their lives in the war. Never since the memorable period has democracy been so threatened, sponsors of the observance say.

The citizenry should have a first-hand knowledge of the protection that its government gives and they believe that Army Day can best afford this opportunity.

President Roosevelt, in a letter to Rear Admiral Reginald R. Belknap, commander-in-chief of the Military Order of the World War, lauding the sponsorship of the observance, declared that the nation has formed the habit of looking to the army for protection in emergencies of peace as well as in time of war.

In commending the ceremonies Secretary of War Woodring stated in part:

"Our army and navy are maintained solely for defense—never for aggression. They are to preserve peace, not wage war."

Happy Family Group With New Member

Too young to understand his changed status, little Freddy Nichols played around his Saugus home [illegible] the [illegible] five years ago.

It was on April Fools Day, 1932, that a woman came to the door of Mrs. Grace Nichols' home [illegible] Saugus, and asked if Mrs. Nichols would board the baby for $6 a week.

The woman never came back [illegible] child as he grew from infancy. Yesterday Mrs. Nichols went into Salem district court and was allowed to adopt the [illegible] whom she and her [illegible] had become [illegible] attached.

So [illegible] the boy [illegible] was Freddy Nichols [illegible] 17-year-old William Nichols, who moved [illegible] 13 years [illegible] was happy indeed.

[illegible] Mrs. Nichols [illegible]

"The baby," Mrs. Nichols said, "was dressed in clothing bought for a child much older and the sleeves and legs had been hacked off. We was so sick I thought we were going to lose him, but he got well and strong.

TRIED TO FIND MOTHER

"She said she would pay $6 a week and gave me a first payment, but asked for the return of carfare back.

"When the woman did not return, I tried in every way I knew to locate her. After a year, when I said I thought I'd turn him over to the state, William, who never had a brother and wanted one, told me that would be a dirty trick and a gyp on him. He pleaded with me to keep the baby.

"Finally I was persuaded not to give him up but to keep him and stop looking for the mother.

"Now I'm glad. Freddy is a lovely little boy, smart as a whip. I wouldn't part with him for the world."

REPEAL GROUP QUITS FIGHT

Disheartened by [illegible] House's [illegible] oath repeal [illegible] both House and Senate, proponents of the measure virtually abandoned [illegible] today to have it [illegible] another two years.

It was [illegible] not even make an [illegible] the present oath law taken off the statute books [illegible]

The action of the House in sustaining Governor Hurley's veto by a 121 to [illegible] vote [illegible] legislation to repeal the [illegible] law can be considered [illegible] and, in view of the governor's attitude on the subject, it would be [illegible] to attempt repeal during his term of office.

In stating his reasons for the veto Governor Hurley said:

"Repeal now would encourage certain vicious minorities whose motives and conduct are inimical to, and destructive of, the principles upon which this republic was founded. These small groups of persons would construe repeal triumphantly."

Declaring the oath is inoffensive and not class discriminatory, as contended by its opponents, Governor Hurley added:

"This law was a compliment rather than discriminatory, in that it recognizes the teaching profession as a responsible and potent agency in charting the standards and habits of our people."

Roxbury Theater Blaze Probed

Fire officials were today probing a blaze in the basement of the Roxbury Theater, Washington street, Roxbury, which drove four painters to the street, overcame six firemen and caused $[illegible] damage.

The painters working in the theater, saw smoke seeping from the basement and shouted to a passing pedestrian to sound an alarm.

When firemen arrived they had difficulty in reaching the source of the blaze and six of them were slightly overcome. They were revived, however, and returned to duty.

Seat cushions and other property stored in the basement were destroyed. The fire was confined to the basement.

Around World in 11 Years

The Boston Evening American presents herewith the 13th chapter of "Around the World in Eleven Years," the amazing best-seller book by the famous Abbe children. Patience, Richard and Johnny Abbe have collaborated in writing one of the most remarkable of travel stories—their experiences (they are still children)—and impressions of life in France, Austria, Germany, Russia, England and the United States. The little authors were born in France of American parents, James E. and Polly Platt Abbe. The story will continue daily in the American and Sunday Advertiser.

By PATIENCE, RICHARD and JOHN ABBE

CHAPTER XIII

We had our lunch there in the school and ate kasha and tea, and black bread. We had lots of it, because Stalin feeds all the children in Russia. It cost us 40 kopeks a week. We used to have bread fights at table. We made the bread in balls and threw them around. The children were nice, but our teacher said we were lots of trouble because we were naughty. The other children said they used to eat cake for breakfast sometimes because they didn't often have cake. And they had cocoa once in a while.

Sometimes we hated the Czars because they were like Marie Antoinette who said, if the people have no bread, let them eat cake. She was cruel too. How could the people eat cake if they didn't have any bread? It doesn't cost so much to make bread as cake.

But they told me, Richard, that the Red Army had plenty to eat. But we didn't like the idea of going to war and killing all the Capitalists, because you might get killed yourself. Why do people have to fight all the time? I don't know.

Mamma says people go to wars because they always did, and look how we fight ourselves.

I don't like wars because you get killed and blind and your eyes out, and your brain gets crazy, and you lose your hands and arms and little children don't get any milk and sometimes you kill your own brother.

Roubles in Hat

The Russians don't like wars but we don't understand then why they want to kill Capitalists. The Capitalists are the people who have lots of money. The teacher said they didn't really want to kill the Capitalists but to take their money away from them and give it to the people.

But I don't see how you can take the money away from the Capitalists without killing them.

Then we left Moscow, and all our friends put roubles in a hat on the floor because we were escaping with Papa's negatives. The government wouldn't give us any money for Papa's work so that's why we were poor.

Mamma was very rude to Lifschitz. He had a big lump on his back because the Cossacks had beat him when he was a boy. Lifschitz didn't answer Mamma back, and Mamma said they were all robbers.

Then Mamma was mad because Chumak who used to help Papa stole Papa's camera, and Mamma was going out and beat him. Chumak said he stole the camera because Papa didn't pay him. But the government didn't pay Papa so that's why we were poor.

Then Alva Christensen and Mary de Give bought Papa's camera back from Chumak and then we had it again. Alma and Mary had also trouble with the government. We paid the hotel bill and the man here nearly fainted.

Then we went to the station and everybody was there and said, "Gruss Gott, God speed, Good luck and for God's sake don't come back. You've had enough trouble, and we hope we can have some peace when you are gone."

They were all laughing, and so were we, and they said to Mr. Lane, who was on the train, "Will you see that these Abbes don't get lost and that they get to Berlin?"

We got out of Russia because Papa showed the GPU Stalin's picture with Stalin's name on it, and then we got to Warsaw and Mr. Lane got out to get a glass of beer and the train went off without him and we had his baggage and he telegraphed us to take care of it, so we got to Berlin before he did.

We had lots of trunks and things, but nothing in them but papers and things. Mamma didn't have a hat and Papa had two dollars in his pocket. So we went over to the Frau Doktor's hotel, and she wasn't mean any more and said so and gave us a lovely breakfast. Then we went out later and I ate wurst and chocolate because we hadn't had such nice things for so long. But we ate too much and were all awful sick.

* * *

Then Papa sold all his pictures to [illegible] Szafranski and Herr Korff and we were rich again and then Uncle Knick said:

"My stars, Polly (that's Mamma), why don't you get a roof over your heads!" And Mamma said, "What is the matter with this. I like these blue satin rooms." But Uncle Knick said, "Yes, I know, but it costs too much, and you ought to get to a place where you can cook and give up Aschingers" (that was a restaurant on the Potsdamerplatz).

So Mamma and we went out on the streets looking for a house to live in.

And we found a house on the Victoriastrasse that had a big iron gate in front, then another big corridor, and marble statues on the wall, and a lift. Mamma said:

"On this floor, the first coming in, a man who used to be a Minister lives. This makes it chic. We shall take this place." So we took it.

It was a big studio on the top floor with all the top windows, and so big that we could roll up and down the floor on our scooters. Then we went with Mamma to buy some furniture.

We got five chairs, one for each person. They cost one mark fifty pfennigs. They were wooden and beautiful. But they were kind of hard when you sat on them a long time, because they didn't have any cushions on them. The portier gave us a tea table made out of straw.

Then we got two iron beds for Mamma and Papa and three iron beds for us. There was a very little room for us to sleep in. Mamma and Papa slept in the big room.

Clothes on Nail

So Mamma had the man in the store make the beds for us to stand one on top of the other, and it just fitted in our room. We hung our clothes on nails in the wall. Everybody had a bed and a chair.

Then Mamma bought blue satin covers for all of us, and so we moved in. We had lots of baskets and trunks, so we kept our clothes in them. We had a bathroom with hot and cold water whenever you wanted it.

One day we had a party for housewarming and everybody came and sat on our trunks and baskets and we set the table with the tea table and another basket. And Mamma said:

"Well, Knick, you see we have a roof over our heads," and Uncle Knick who is very funny and has fierce brown eyes, said, "Yeah, but it had to be a glass one."

But we liked it because it was glass.

Boy, that was a nice house. We'd rather live in it than the Saxona Hotel.

Robot Heart Miracle

THYROID KEPT ALIVE IN PUMP

By G. B. LAL

Copyright, 1937, by Universal Service

New York, April 2 (US)—Dr. Alexis Carrel, Nobel prize winning surgeon, has perfected a method of keeping the whole thyroid gland alive outside the body by use of the Lindbergh-Carrel robot "heart."

This was learned here at the Rockefeller Institute where the famous scientist has carried out his experiments.

In the April issue of the Journal of Experimental Medicine, Dr. Carrel's report is published declaring:

"A technique has been developed for transplanting whole thyroid gland into the Lindbergh pump, and its perfusion, without the occurrence of infection, emboli and other complications.

"The gland remains alive during the period of perfusion which lasted from 3 to 21 days.

"The technique is simple enough to be used as a routine procedure for physiological or pathological studies of the thyroid gland."

Dr. Carrel has kept the thyroid glands of cats, rabbits and chickens alive, separated from the animals bodies by transplanting them into the Lindbergh pump which circulates a nutritive food into the organ.

He and Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh reported construction of the robot heart last year.

The remarkable thing about the fluid used within is that it contains no red blood cells, nor even hemoglobin, the red pigment of the normal blood cells, which carries the oxygen molecules. Despite this, the thyroids remained without change in structure, Dr. Carrel reported.

SCIENCE FINDS BEST CLIMATE IN BOSTON

The laugh was on both Florida and California today as New England citizens became cognizant of this section's "even climatic conditions" following the publication of the first encyclopedia of North American weather conditions ever compiled.

Prepared by Harvard meteorologists, in co-operation with scientists of the United States, Alaska, Canada and Mexico, the work combines tables detailing the weather history of important centers for over a half a century, and heaps orchid and nods in the general vicinity of Boston.

Declaring that the Boston and New England center has the evenest type of weather in the country, the report contrasts our climatic conditions with those experienced in the far and middle west.

100 RAINY DAYS A YEAR

Whereas Pacific Coast locales hold the country's records for heavy precipitation in rain or snow, with an average fall of 200 inches, New England has on the average of a little over three inches of water, in rain or snow, a month, and winds up the normal year with a total of about 40 inches.

Revealing that Boston has on the average of a hundred rainy days a year, the encyclopedia discloses the fact that Northwestern Washington averages upwards of 190 rainy days a year and occasionally sees a storm session of 30 to 40-day duration.

Among the weather freaks revealed by the Harvard survey are the fact that the outstanding sunshine centers of the United States are the California-Arizona borderland, which averages more than 300 clear days a year, and St. Petersburg, Fla., which has less than five sunless days a year.

500 KILLED YEARLY

So once again California takes a back seat and the Floridan gloats momentarily. However, to southern California goes a real nod. Revealing that the driest part of the country lies in the area of southern California, southwestern Arizona and western Nevada, the report shows that this region has only an average of eight inches of rain a year.

According to scientific statistics brought out in the encyclopedia, it is revealed that between 500 and 700 people a year are killed by lightning in the United States and twice as many are injured. The largest mortality occurs in the Ohio valley and Middle Atlantic states, and the average damage done by lightning fires total $12,000,000 a year.

Nudists Banned at Paris Exposition

San Francisco, April 2 (AP)—There will be no fan dancers or nudists at the Paris International Exposition this Summer, Mayor Raymond Leinert of Paris said today as he invited San Franciscans to the exhibit.

Aunt Will Adopt Fred Bartholomew

Hollywood, April 2 (AP)—Miss Myllicent Bartholomew, who successfully resisted efforts of Freddie Bartholomew's parents to replace her as his guardian, now seeks to adopt her $1,000-a-week actor nephew.

Miss Bartholomew said the adoption would be approved.

The parents, Cecil and Lilian Bartholomew, reached an agreement with her and Freddie last June whereby they were to receive living expenses from their son's salary and trust funds were to be established for his sisters, Eileen [illegible] and Hilda 14.

Beck May Become Envoy

Cannes, France, April 2 (INS)—Col. Josef Beck, Polish foreign minister on vacation here, may resign his post to become ambassador to Paris, it was reported today.

Steals Police Station

Philadelphia, April 2 (AP)—Peter Holofsky, 40, charged with stealing a police station a piece at a time, was sentenced to six months. He pleaded guilty to selling 6500 pounds of scrap iron from an abandoned station, including the cell doors.

Second Week At Park for 'Ecstasy'

The cinema sensation, "Ecstacy," starring the European Hedy Keisler, begins its second big week today at the Park theater, where it is being shown daily continuously from 9 a. m. to 11 p. m.

Hedy Keisler

Max Reinhardt has called the Keisler "the loveliest girl in Europe." Her husband, Fritz Mandel, president of Austria's Hirtenberg Ammunition Works, agrees entirely with Herr Reinhardt but he is determined that Hedy's first shall also be her last picture. His efforts to buy up all copies of "Ecstacy" in this country as well as in Europe have made material for countless newspaper stories.

'Swing Time' At Scollay

The script of "Swing High, Swing Low" skips from the Canal Zone to New York. There is music, color, romance and comedy galore. Prominently featured in the cast are Charles Butterworth, Dorothy Lamour, Jean Dixon and Harry Stephens.

Goldwyn to Film Trailer Story

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS
Motion Picture Editor Universal Service
Copyright, 1937, by Universal Service

Los Angeles, April 2—Samuel Goldwyn not only got a good rest during his recent vacation in Tucson, Arizona—he also got a bright idea.

Sam was so impressed by the number of trailers he saw on the road and in particular by a complete village made up of these homes on wheels that he promptly wired Harry Selby in New York to whip up an original story about a trailer town. Selby is the N. Y. newspaperman who authored "Goldwyn Follies."

Louella O. Parsons

The yarn temporarily titled "Heaven on Wheels," is a hilarious comedy (you might say "It Happened One Night on Wheels") and will serve as Barbara Stanwyck's second for Goldwyn on her two-picture contract. She'll make "Stella Dallas" first.

Joel McCrea will be her vis-a-vis and Frank Shields, at the moment on the loan-out to Republic, will have his best part to date. Sam is hoping to get Gregory Lacava to direct. Greg was responsible for the uproarious "My Man Godfrey."

* * *

Here's good news for the kids of the country no matter which way it turns out. Several months ago when Sol Lesser bought six "Tarzan" stories from Edgar Rice Burroughs, it left MGM without any more Tarzan properties. Now comes word that Johnny Weissmuller, the original jungle yodeler, and MGM will probably call it a day at the end of his present six months' option, which is just as good as a bet that Johnny will move over to Lesser to continue his love calling!

Guess this will leave Baseballer Lou Gehrig holding the bat—only I hear Lou's been praying Sol wouldn't like his tests for Tarzan because he doesn't.

* * *

Marian Marsh should be flattered. After testing a goodly number of young leading women for the spot opposite his discovery, John Trent, in "The Ascending Dragon," B. P. Schulberg has decided that Marian fills the bill.

Schulberg is determined to build Trent, the young aviator who made such a hit with his film debut in "A Doctor's Diary" and is surrounding him with an excellent cast. Akim Tamiroff, recently one of the runners-up for the Academy award for the best supporting player of 1936, has an important part. Others in the cast of "The Ascending Dragon," mystery-thrill comedy, are Ralph Morgan, Genevieve Tobin and William Demarest. Charles Vidor directs.

Maybe Gertrude Michael's contract cancellation with RKO by mutual consent will be the turning point in the most jinxed year of her life—and that's no crack at RKO. Changes have been known to break jinxes and certainly she has a respite due from all the bad luck that started with that serious automobile accident, followed by months of illness in a New York hospital. She thought she had fully recovered and returned to Hollywood only to have to return to a hospital.

All in all, it has been such an unfortunate year, you can't blame Gertie for wanting to wipe the slate clean and start all over again.

* * *

MGM and RKO, both of whom were planning to sign Maria Shelton to long term contracts when Walter Wanger beat them to the punch, will now have to borrow the young lady from Walter. When he [illegible] of 1938' Walter will loan her to RKO for "There Goes My Girl," then to MGM (w[illegible] let her option lapse) for second leads in "General Hospital" and "Married at High Noon." She's also being tested for the role of Kay in "Dead End." Looks as if Walter got a bargain.

"See," he said sternly, "I have practically a bid from a rival concern."

"We'll fight them over you," the nurse retorted politely, "and whichever side loses will have to take you.")

'7th Heaven' Rich Film Fare

By PEGGY DOYLE

It's James Stewart who puts the tenderness and the stardust into "Seventh Heaven," which moistened the eyes of moviegoers ten years ago when Janet Gaynor and Charles Farrell co-starred in the fabulously successful silent version. Five years before that it served Helen Menken as a legitimate vehicle.

In its latest reincarnation, for which Twentieth Century-Fox is responsible and which is currently showing at the Met, the dewy-fresh little French gadget Simone Simon is a pretty pouting Diane.

Hers is a variable performance that skips quickly the terror and bewilderment and fear that Gaynor and Menken gave to the role of the little street waif of Montmartre. She runs the entire emotional gamut from pouts to squeaks. But she's a provocative, pretty thing who wins your admiring glances even if she fails to arouse your pity for her pre-seventh heaven plight.

* * *

Stewart, however, as that remarkable fellow, Chico, is all and more than you could ask. His boyish bravado, his shy lovemaking, his utter misery when he must part from Diane, his elaborate casualness over the momentous gift of the wedding-dress, these are all high points in young Stewart's grand performance.

Gregory Ratoff, the cabman in shabby tophat and greatcoat, gives a zestful, meaty performance with an undertone of comedy that is captivating.

John Qualen, a sewer rat even as Chico before he rose to the importance of a street washer, conveys his great content in his lowly job with every breath he takes. He makes his small role gleam.

J. Edward Bromberg, near-sighted astronomer, devoted ally of Chico's, gives a distinguished performance and so does that splendid actress Gale Sondergaard in a brief but biting characterization as the cruel elder sister of Diane.

Jean Hersholt as the slums priest, is humane, tolerant and understanding in his interludes with the self-proclaimed atheist Chico.

* * *

Hollywood's Wini Shaw, singing siren, and Roy Atwell, language mixer-upper, top the Met's stage show "Hollywood Melody." Others in the ensemble are Baxter and Dean, Edith Mann, Edward Rickard, the Jansleys and the 24 Lovelies.

Miss Shaw sings "Too Marvelous for Words," hit song of "Ready, Willing and Able," "I've Got the St. Louis Blues," "Lady in Red" and "The Night Was Young."

Bitterness Turned to Love

Revue Sparkles Brightly On RKO Boston Stage

The curvacious co-ed whose shower-bath made the headlines is luring them into the Keith-Boston but it's those priceless oofty-gooftles, the Three Sailors, who are keeping them in their seats for a repeat show.

At yesterday's opening show, the rear of the theater was packed as tightly as anchovies in a tin when N. T. G. sauntered onto the stage with his "Broadway After Dark" revue in tow.

There were Vera Fern, acrobatic dancer who was a "Baby" Wampus" star; Gladys Crane, in a black sequinned sheath, an Earl Carroll beauty just returned from an RKO-Radio Hollywood rendezvous; Charmion, who is as dexterous with a shawl as Sally Rand is with a fan, and the world's most publicized college girl, Heloise Martin, with only a peekaboo cellophane wrap to keep her warm.

All lovely to look at and easy on the ears, whether tapping or warbling. For art-lovers (?) N. T. G. has provided a series of tableaux, in which a bevy of beautiful nudies depict spring, summer, winter and fall. The dancing Digatanos also do their part for art.

For laughs, though, give the K-B audience the Three Sailors, whose many goings-on were equally amusing to the late King George V and the Duke of Windsor, for whom they gave command performances. They (the Boston seat-warmers, we mean) couldn't get enough of them, and so they'll probably be at the Met today when "Top of the Town," in which they are featured, comes to the screen.

"She's Dangerous" is the film attraction at the Boston this week. Tala Birell is cast as a lady sleuth and Cesar Romero as a gangster smoothie, whose light-fingered touch has wrapped itself around a half-million dollars' worth of bonds. The story simply reeks with excitement, and having a goodly share in it are also Walter Pidgeon, Warren Hymer, Walter Brennan and Richard Carle.—PEGGY DOYLE.

Tense Drama on Twin Screens

By HARRIS MORGAN

Warren William is the victim of mob fury in "Outcast," film version of Frank R. Adams' novel and magazine serial "Happiness Preferred," which opened yesterday on the Paramount and Fenway screens.

He is cast as Philip Wendel Jones, who takes refuge in a small town when his best friend has him removed from an important hospital post because he believes Jones responsible for the death of his wife. Previously the surgeon had been acquitted of all blame in the death.

Seeking further vengeance, the dead woman's husband, discovering Jones' whereabouts, sends his sister, Margaret (Karen Morley) to seek him out and expose him.

Abbott (Lewis Stone), a lawyer who has befriended the distraught doctor, convinces the young woman of her brother's injustice to Jones. He asks her to withhold judgment until she has learned the facts. She falls in love with Jones. Meanwhile the newspapers, tipped off to the story, play it up with eight-column lines.

With all the erstwhile friendly townspeople turned against him, Jones is now called upon to perform an emergency operation upon a child who [illegible] mother's [illegible] further [illegible] him. Melitta Does Torch Dance | Perry, Tilden Here Monday

By JACK CONWAY

Karl Schafer of Austria, greatest skater in the world, will add to the glamour and color of "Cracked Ice." He will make the most difficult skating feats look easy.

TENNIS AS PROFESSIONAL SPORT

I WAS soundly shocked when Bill Tilden first joined the ranks of the professional tennis players under a group that included Jack Curley, wrestling promoter, as one of its members.

As a young sports reporter I had covered tennis matches at Newport, Longwood and at The Country Club in Brookline, and I gathered the false notion that the tennis stars were strictly amateur and were not concerned with making money out of their ability.

I even overlooked the padded expense accounts which the [illegible] turned when they participated in an amateur [illegible] after all, I argued, the players had to live in a set [illegible]

BEES PLAN RETURN OF DIMAGGIO TO SAN DIEGO

Brother of Yankee Star a Failure

RETURN $10,000 CHECK TO QUINN

San Diego, Cal., April 2—Vince DiMaggio's big league aspirations will have to be postponed for a year at least.

The br[illegible] of the New York Yankees [illegible] is headed back [illegible] San Diego club in the Pacific [illegible] League for more [illegible]. This was made known by William Lane, owner [illegible].

Lane announced that the Boston Bees, who purchased DiMaggio from San Diego, are displeased with his showing and want to return him.

McGowan Assured Of Regular Berth

By BILL GRIMES

[illegible]

LOOKS GOOD AT BAT

run lead over in Tampa Wednesday to the Cincinnati Reds, McKechnie ordered his charges to report at Waterfront Park early the next day. After a two-hour fielding and batting session, McKechnie divided his squad and staged a nine-inning Varsity vs Jayvees game.

McGowan was assigned to cover center field for the Jayvees. The outfield at Waterfront Park is sandy and therefore very treacherous.

McGowan, making his initial appearance of the season in the outfield, came up with two of the best plays of the game.

He raced back to the old timers diamond in deep left and pulled down a long drive off Gene Moore's bat, and then dashed over to the foul line and robbed Tony Cuccinello of a two bagger.

There isn't a batter on the entire Bees' roster who looks better at the plate than McGowan. And just as soon as the soil warrants his taking a chance, he will be a regular member of the Bees.

When the Red Sox-Bees game which was scheduled for this afternoon was called off in order to avoid conflicting with the annual Festival of States carnival, McKechnie planned to give his boys a day off, but after that affair in Tampa he was convinced the Bees could not afford a lay off.

BREAK CAMP MONDAY

The Bees reported at Waterfront Park early this morning and then [illegible] early this afternoon.

The Buffalo Bisons will clash with the Bees here tomorrow afternoon and then the McKechniemen [illegible] up their 17th annual spring training session with the [illegible] Sunday.

On Monday morning the Bees will break camp and head for Lakeland where they conclude [illegible] with the Detroit Tigers, and the following day they'll [illegible] the state to Daytona Beach [illegible] with the St. Louis Cardinals, whom they turned back here last Monday.

Then they'll start North, arriving home two weeks from today.

Yanetti Favorite To Whip Ricciotti

The stage is all set for an evening of real fight action tonight at Mechanics Building where the Goodwin A. C. will present another fistic carnival featuring Dante Yanetti of Chelsea and Joe Ricciotti of the North End in a ten rounder.

Here is a battle that promises to be one of the greatest ever staged here. Yanetti and Ricciotti are bitter enemies and will have large followings from their native sections behind them.

These two youngsters have been anxious to get at each other for some time, but it was not until Matchmaker Valenti stepped into the picture that the match was finally clinched.

Fuller Aids

Incidentally Yanetti, who will rule a slight favorite, will have Sammy Fuller in his corner handing him against Ricciotti. It is not unlikely that this match will end in a knockout. The story is that Yanetti will go out throwing punches in hopes of scoring a quick victory.

There are five six rounders listed and it seems everybody wants to box in the semi-final spot. Valenti finally came to an agreement whereby the boxers would draw lots to see what spot they go on in.

Seldom has there been such an array of local young talent assembled on one card as there is in this show tonight.

Bartolo's Bow

Walter Marciezak of Providence, R. I., amateur boxing champion, will meet Jackie Capparell of Roxbury, and Pat Foley of Worcester takes on Irish Tommy Logan of Holyoke.

LABBE

Defeats Carroll

AT EGLESTON

Don Labbe, Lewiston, 156, was in line today for a N. E. middleweight championship bout with Lou Brouillard next month as a result of his victory over Eddie Carroll, Lowell, 153, in a punch-packed feature 10-round of Eddie Mack's boxing carnival at Egleston Square Stadium before 1200 fans.

Labbe took the fourth chapter in this long feud by rallying in the last two rounds with a blazing two-fisted attack.

Carroll, fighting a smart jabbing fight until then, wilted under the attack. Labbe's late surge threw Carroll off stride and he lost the slim edge he had piled up in early rounds. Judges Bates and Morris and Referee Moore all voted for Labbe.

Labbe won his first eight-round fight with Carroll. The second two ended in 10-round draws.

Roy Kelley, 169, lost his first fight as a pro in the semifinal to George Fitch, 174, colored Holyoke slugger. Body punches wore down the Brookline butcher boy, and he finished but occasionally.

In other sixes on the slugging program Tony Bent, 138, Cambridge, beat Buster Carroll, 144, Lowell, to a decision. Dom Colantonio, 136, [illegible], beat Frisco Dick, 141, Lewiston, to a decision and Johnny Hogan, 175, New Haven, scored a technical kayo over Walter Wazal, 165, Fitchburg, when Wazal was forced to resign after three rounds because of a bad cut over his eye. Wazal was out front until the injury stopped him.

AQUATIC

Funster to Show

IN FOLLIES

Feminine pulchritude will abound in the Water Follies of 1937, to be staged at Boston Arena, April 8, 9, 10, 11, with such charmsters as Eleanor Holm, Dorothy Poynton Hill and Cornelia Gulissen of New York in the leading roles, but it's more than likely that gawky madcap funster from Hollywood, Bill Lewin, will steal the show from the ladies.

Lewin made one appearance in Boston several months ago, and those fortunate enough to have seen him voted him the greatest mirth-provoker ever to visit the city.

Lewin was born in Toronto, Canada. Always a good swimmer and diver he entered the prominent swim meets of the Dominion and soon captured the Canadian high diving championship.

He ultimately gained a winning place in the British Empire games held at London, England.

A close friend and school mate of his who had found a place in Hollywood and remembered the flare Bill had for comedy stunts in the water, induced him to go to the movie city and take a crack at stunting in aquatic comedy roles for the movies.

Perhaps Lewin's masterpiece of burlesque is his pantomime of the various strokes of the swimmers of various lands, India, Egypt, Switzerland, Japan, England, Russia and a take-off on the local harbor champ.

DETROIT

Tops Canadiens

FOR TITLE

Montreal, April 2 (US)—After more than 51 minutes of gruelling overtime play, Hec Kilrea whipped the deciding goal at 12.30 a. m. this morning to give the Detroit Red Wings a 2 to 1 victory over Les Canadiens and the National Hockey League title.

The victory moved the Wings into the finals of the Stanley Cup playoff, where they will meet the winners of the Rangers-Maroons semifinals.

New York, April 2 (US)—Walter "Babe" Pratt, New York's versatile hockey star, sent the Rangers off to an auspicious start in their semi-final round Stanley Cup play-off series against the Montreal Maroons.

Cronin Headed for Outfield

Infield All Set, Gardeners Weak Offensively

BY JOE CASHMAN

Sarasota, Fla., April 2—There's a possibility that Manager Joe Cronin will end up playing the outfield for his Red Sox this season.

The pilot is reluctant to talk about it, but he admitted to us today he entertains the idea. We can't see how he can escape trying to carry it out.

In fact, in our opinion, Joe would be taking a whirl at the garden right now if Eric McNair were slightly calmer of mind and stronger of arm.

There's no way of placing both McNair and Pinky [illegible] in the infield with Foxx, Higgins and Doerr around. Cronin of course might prove a flop in the outfield, a spot he has never tried, but we're guessing he'd make a go of it.

"The way I feel now," he chirps, "I could play anywhere. Sure I thought of the outfield. I'm not exactly anxious to try it, never having been out there. I'd much rather the regular candidates would fill the bill.

"If they don't start hitting better than they have been, however, I'll probably have no other alternative but to shift, providing Eric McNair is fit to play shortstop.

Should Cronin try the outfield, [illegible] undoubtedly would be [illegible] Moses and Fabian Gaffke for the berth [illegible] he being [illegible] to the [illegible] side of the field.

Moses had been the leading candidate for that job but he suffered a self-inflicted [illegible] in [illegible] game and [illegible] is now [illegible] with the opportunity to prove his worth.

[illegible] a 2-1 lead [illegible] called [illegible] and Ted [illegible] was [illegible] in the sixth.

FRED HOEY Writes:

BASEBALL GAMES BIG BUSINESS
175 EMPLOYED BY SOX, BEES

Hello, everybody. This is Fred Hoey speaking:

Behind the scenes in the daily presentation of ball games at Fenway Park and National League Field lies a story about the enormous amount of detail that makes the efforts of the 18 ball players on the field seem somewhat infinitesimal in comparison.

Fred Hoey

Those players are the show-pieces, the magnet that pays the freight, hence the constant glare of the spotlight and total obscurity for those in the background who make these daily games possible.

To stage successful big league ball games today requires, first of all, an attractive team. Scattered around various spots at either ball park on busy days are some 175 persons connected in some way with the presentation of these games, yet fans never give these workers a tumble. They pay to see baseball played, not men work.

Hi Mason, another Sox secretary, has the tough "at home" job. Hi has charge of the ticket sellers, ticket collectors, stile boys, ushers, matrons and the sweepers who clean up the stands after a game. Mason has chosen well for assistants.

It requires 30 men for door service on big days, with as many stile boys. For all this work both Boston clubs have a staff of nearly 60 men to pick from.

* * *

Both the Red Sox and Bees employ the same staff of ushers, headed by Joe Connolly, quiet, popular and efficient. These ushers are stand-outs. They make a very natty appearance in their light and dark uniforms. Connolly's men stand by their posts from the time the gates open until after the final innings, ready to render any favor or courtesy that cash customers may request.

Chief Connolly uses 30 ushers on big days. On these days, as a rule, the first 12 or 16 rows of the grand stand seats are reserved, with those behind of the rush variety, first come, first served.

On special occasions like the All-Star game last summer the entire grand stand is reserved. This policy would apply if Boston won a pennant. Says who?

Two matrons are on duty at both ball parks. Eddie Cummings doubles in brass. Eddie's mellow voice is heard over the P. A. system and he also supervises the score boards. He has two assistants behind the score boards.

Coming down to the playing field we find Hedley Osmond and 14 [illegible] responsible for the condition of the diamond and the outfield. T[illegible] K[illegible] in the Press Room is indispensable, especially [illegible].

On busy days a detail of 20 police officers in addition to mounted [illegible] and the [illegible] are on hand from Station 16. [illegible] of Fenway Park is the club's parking space directed by Tom [illegible].

* * *

Going over to National League Field we find Bob Quinn's staff just as efficient. Son John Quinn, dynamic secretary, who served his apprenticeship with the Red Sox before joining his Dad, knows what it's all about. John is Bob's right eye.

Johnny O'Leary is another of the Bees' executive force who is an expert at handling tickets. Tommy McManus in the ticket reservation window is one of the best. Johnny McNamara, ball retriever in the press box, certainly earns his dough as he balances himself on the roof.

We find the help required by both Boston parks on a busy day is the same, about 175. The only difference is in the policing. The Bees have six special officers but if an event demands it, a detail of police is requested of Captain John McGrath of Station 14.

Stepping onto the field we are confronted with a strange phenomenon. George Hunt, who spent most of his life with Klaw and Erlanger's theatrical shows as an executive, is superintendent of Bees Field. This makes him ground keeper as well.

Now we come to the peanut, score card, pop bottle sellers, etc., known as hustlers. These [illegible] are employed by the Harry Stevens, Inc., with [illegible] Pat Delaney as local head. The boys are under the direct charge of Tom Cumm[illegible], a wonder at handling boys.

EPITAPH WILSON'S BEST BET

Starts in 3rd Race At Bowie

By DAVE WILSON

BEST BET—EPITAPH, 3rd RACE

Bowie Race Track, Md., April 2—C. F. Swords' Epitaph, on general Florida form, shapes up vastly superior to indifferent platers of the $1250 top and bottom variety opposing him in the six furlongs of the third stanza here tomorrow.

Epitaph is very partial to the local racing strip.

He has [illegible] well for the race and [illegible] a [illegible] ride to [illegible].

FIRST—Emvee, Sir Isaac, Itsie Bitsie

EMVEE, a Hialeah Park winner, has been given a much needed rest since a strenuous campaign at Tropical Park. When fresh and good the Vito gelding is capable of running the eyeballs out of opposition such as that encountered in this $1250 claimer. SIR ISAAC, on Florida form, shapes up slightly better than ITSIE BITSIE in the fight for place honors. The latter raced well at the Fair Grounds.

SECOND—Good Flavor, Zebulo, Little Argo

GOOD FLAVOR, away since last fall, needs only to duplicate brilliant trials to insure brackets. Six furlongs in 1:16 went as a final conditioner. ZEBULO was barely beaten by LITTLE ARGO on opening day. The Zev mare will have a six-pound shift in her favor here. LITTLE ARGO [illegible] well despite added poundage.

THIRD—Epitaph, Wise Bun, Heartease

If anything hops up and hands EPITAPH a drubbing it will likely be WISE BUN. The latter turned in several corking efforts on Florida tracks the past winter. HEARTEASE has been away from the races since last fall, but several corking works attest to fitness.

FOURTH—Justa Flight, Continuity, Kindred Spirit

JUSTA FLIGHT, [illegible] to Happy Flag and Continuity on opening day, was very poorly ridden in that most recent endeavor. Under better handling the Waugh color bearer should reverse the tables on CONTINUITY. The latter finished a head in advance of the top selection in the above mentioned race. KINDRED SPIRIT has excellent Florida form to recommend him for show award.

FIFTH—Calumet Dick, Mucho Gusto, Weston

SIXTH—Building Trades, Chief Yeoman, Hunterdon

BUILDING TRADES [illegible] CHIEF YEOMAN [illegible].

SEVENTH—Capt. Jerry, Dornildo, Popo

Sticking [illegible] with CAPT. JERRY [illegible]. This plater has been away from the races since last fall, but he is a [illegible] DORNILDO [illegible] POPO [illegible].

Lippy Leo Durocher Silenced

Pre-game practice was costly for the St. Louis Cardinals as Leo Durocher, star shotstop, was beaned by a ball and had to be carried off the field. The fiery Red Bird short field guardian was kept out of the exhibition game with the Yanks by the force of the blow. The extent of the injury has not been determined, but the spark plug of the Cards' infield will be out of the lineup for at least a week.

Australian To Wrestle 365-Pounder

[illegible]

"I was glad of a chance to land Harben," Bowser said. "He has been highly recommended to me. For several years he has beaten many of America's foremost wrestlers who have invaded Australia.

"A year ago, I tried to induce him to come to this country for a series of matches.

"While Davis had been well recommended and like Johnson, is a giant, I want to see him in a match before sending him against Johnson or any other topnotch matman.

Games tonight at 7 o'clock will bring together 12 teams for first round trials with New Bedford drawing a bye for the quarter-finals which are scheduled for 8.30 p. m.

Stamford, Ct., vs. Worcester (Ionic Avenue building).

JOE LOUIS TOUR A BUST

New York, April [illegible] (AP)—Don't be surprised if the Boston Bees turn out to be the "hot" team in the National League for the first month or six weeks.

The Bees are coming north splendidly conditioned, Bill McKechnie has his veteran pitchers ready and most of the team's early opposition will be furnished by the Dodgers and Phillies.

Perry, of course, was the big attraction. The American public will always pay top money to see the champion in any branch of sports.

Perry will be at the local Garden next Monday with Tilden as an opponent. I find that our tennis enthusiasts are getting as much steamed up over this match as fight fans do over a world heavyweight championship bout.

Here Is Your Spring Topcoat

But Much Finer Than $30 Usually Buys

Your Spring Topcoat at Kennedy's is indeed much finer than $30 usually buys. We employed finer fabrics than you usually find in $30 Topcoats . . . the tailoring is superior to the $30 sort . . . and even the patterns have an exclusiveness that $30 seldom achieves. See them in the new checks, plaids and mixtures, Raglan or box coat style, slash or patch pockets. Grays, Blus, Browns, Tans—sizes for all men.

KENNEDY'S
SUMMER & HAWLEY

Charge it . . . pay one-third the 10th of May; one-third the 10th of each two following months.

Radioland Reflections

By N. F. T.

NEWS note most noteworthy of the day seems to be that the current "Want to Be an Actor" airing heard Sunday nights will be replaced as of May 9th in favor of a setting that will feature Don Ameche and Edgar Bergen, the former a featured film and "mike" hero. The latter is a mainstay as ventriloquist where Rudy Vallee is concerned each Thursday evening.

And the above advice indicates that the coffee roasting backers of this 8 to 9 o'clock hour have in mind remaining on the network schedule through the forthcoming summer and the [illegible] is likely to afford loud-speaker patrons above par dial diversion. Cut 2 lbs. meat (beef, lamb, or mutton) in very small pieces, roll in flour and sear in fat, tried out in spider. When meat is well browned, put in a kettle with
2 teaspoons salt
½ teaspoon pepper
2 quarts of cold water and simmer until meat is very tender. Add
2 carrots, diced, and
4 teaspoons flour moistened with cold water added and bring to the boiling point. Dumplings may be added.

HADDOCK A LA KING

Scald
2 cups milk in top of double boiler. Add
4 tablespoons flour mixed with
4 tablespoons melted butter. Season to taste. Add
1½ cups cooked haddock, flaked
½ green pepper, parboiled for 5 minutes and cut in strips
4 slices pimento and
6 cup mushrooms which have been skinned and boiled 15 minutes.
Let stand over the hot water for 10 minutes to allow flavor to permeate through the sauce. Serves six.

CASSEROLE OF CORN AND TOMATO

Put into a casserole 1 pint corn, drained. Add 1 can tomato soup. Mix well. Break up 1 slice stale bread and mix well. Cover with buttered bread crumbs or cracker crumbs. Sprinkle with paprika. Bake about 30 minutes in hot oven (400).

AMBER SALAD

To 1 pkg. orange gelatine, add
½ cup boiling water
1½ cups dry ginger ale
2½ cup apple thinly sliced (1 inch in length, leaving skin on)
½ cup celery cut finely
3 slices canned pineapple. Chill in moulds.

CARROT PRESERVE

Cook until soft
4 lbs. carrots which have been put through food grinder, and 4 lemons also put through the grinder with a little water.
When soft add
Before removing from fire add
Seal as for jelly. Makes 11 glasses.

GRAPENUT PUDDING

Bring to a boil
1 quart milk and
1 cup grapenuts; cool and add
2 egg yolks, mixed with
4 tablespoons sugar
Bake in a slow oven (3[illegible]) for 45 minutes. Serves six.

HANEY ON BUSINESS

Imports Higher, EXPORTS BACKWARD, Show Expansion

By LEWIS HANEY
Professor of Economics, New York University

New York, April 2—The tardy government figures now reveal the movement of our exports and imports in February. Both moved up, although the usual occurrence in the month is a decline.

Remembering that the figures are measured in dollars, and therefore are affected by price changes, the following statistical generalizations may be noted:

* * *

Imports are the highest since March, 1930, and 44 per cent above a year ago. They are 92 per cent of average during the period 1921-27.

Exports are the highest since December, 1930, and are only 28 per cent above a year ago. They are only 66 per cent of the 1921-27 average.

* * *

Contrary to a common impression, imports are a much better barometer of domestic business than exports are. In fact, the merchandise imports statistics make a very good business barometer, if allowance be made for the disturbing effects of tariffs, etc.

Thus our soaring imports are an indication that manufacturers and merchants here are buying so much abroad that we may infer that they anticipate further business expansion.

I doubt that the boom here will terminate until imports turn down.

* * *

In this conclusion I find support in my book, entitled "Business Forecasting," which was published back in 1931, when I was bearish. On page 104, there is the following statement:

"A period of decreasing exports, while imports are relatively large, generally precedes a period of poor business.

"It will be found that in the early stages of an upward swing in the business cycle, first exports show a pronounced hump, followed by a rise in imports; then the imports gain on exports, and that marks the later stages of the cycle.

"Exports are likely to be reduced by limitations on foreign loans due to tight money and a declining bond market. Imports are apt to be stimulated by more lavish spending in boom times, by relatively high domestic prices and by great activity in domestic manufacturing."

According to this diagnosis, we had the preliminary "hump" in exports back in 1934. Since then, the tendency has been toward relative gains in imports, at the top of a business cycle.

This is another indication of the culmination of a boom, which does not appear at present. It allows us to hope for a further period of prosperity.

* * *

From the general standpoint of economics, it is important to note that we have been showing a so-called "unfavorable balance of trade" during much of the past year. In other words, we have been exporting less merchandise than we have imported.

In fact, the excess of merchandise imports is much more striking than it seems to be at first. For one thing, the figures do not allow for the large amounts of silver metal which we are importing. Last month we imported 14 million dollars worth of the white metal. Why? (Only the inflationists and "silver senators" know).

Another point is that our exports of copper, iron and steel, petroleum, and recently even cotton, have gained sharply as England and other nations rush to rearm. This is a temporary condition.

* * *

Ordinarily, if we were importing so much more than we exported, we would be sending gold abroad to pay the balance. Actually we imported over 120 million dollars worth of gold in February.

This strange phenomenon is to be explained chiefly by the fact that we are selling our assets so cheaply to foreigners. By devaluing the dollar and inflating our currency, we have, for example, stimulated the virtual export of equities in our corporate industries. Foreigners send gold over to pay for our stocks. We record the gold imports, but do not keep tab on the exports of ownership in our securities and commodities.

STEEL MILL ACTIVITY

HUGE Treasury YIELD

FAILS TO MEET EXPECTATIONS

Washington, April 2 (INS)—Final tabulations revealed today the treasury realized $700,271,831 from income taxes during March, a gain of almost 70 per cent over the same month of 1936, when only $412,452,233 was collected.

Despite this huge increase, the March yield failed to meet expectations of budget officials who had hoped the month would produce $840,000,000.

So far this fiscal year, which began last July and ends June 30, the government has obtained $1,506,870,473 from income taxes. This comares with $1,045,679,394 collected during the corresponding period a year ago.

President Roosevelt, in his budget message, forecast revenues from income levies at $2,372,900,000 for the fiscal period. To obtain this goal, the Treasury must collect $866,029,527 between ow and the end of June.

Total government receipts since July 1 aggregate $3,728,449,453. The President hoped for $5,828,150,719 during the current fiscal year. Social Security taxes, which were estimated to bring in $324,000,000, so far have yielded only $63,000,000. Officials ascribe flood and labor difficulties as contributing factors in the lag of receipts from this source.

Heavy March income collections temporarily reduced the federal deficit, the month showing an excess of $253,482,600 over expenditures. For the fiscal year, however, the deficit stood a t$1,792,532,687.

Heavy movements of gold again were noted during March. The Treasury's inactive gold fund, into which all new acquisitions of the metal are placed, increased by more than $132,000,000 during March, bringing the government's gold holdings to $11,573,731,221, highest in history.

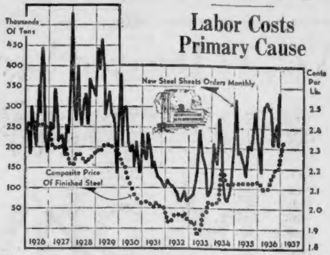
Steel Prices Up Sharply

Labor Costs Primary Cause



Steel prices are being advanced, according to reports from the industry, primarily because of higher labor costs. Naturally enough, this advance will be passed along through the prices of finished steel products, which, as shown on this chart, were at the highest level in January of this year since early 1927.

This ten-year high record for finished steel prices has accompanied a sharp increase in steel sheet orders. These orders, in December, 1936, marked a peak for the month since 1927.

Orders early this year, it is indicated, were running well ahead of recent months. Some part of these orders was by far-seeing purchasers who anticipated either labor troubles or price advances, or both.

Now that the industry is supposedly over the immediate labor trouble hurdle and prices have been upped, it remains to be seen whether the forward orders were at the expense of activity usually occurring later in the year.

Wall Street Sidelights

New York, April 2—Stock of one of the oldest units in the aviation industry will be dealt in on the New York Stock Exchange when the $1 par value common stock of the Glenn L. Martin Company is admitted to dealings.

The issue has been admitted to listing by the Exchange and now awaits the approval of the Securities and Exchange Commission. Although organized in 1928, the present company succeeded to a business which was established in 1907, making it one of the oldest in aviation. Its present business includes the designing, engineering, manufacture and sale of aircraft and parts for commercial and military use. For years a large part of the company's business has been with the United States army and navy. In 1934 and 1935 a fairly large part of the total sales represented in order for three flying boats for Pan-American Airways. The company's foreign business last year amounted to $1,709,340 out of a total of $6,219,774. Orders on hand recently totaled about $12,500,000, all of which were scheduled for delivery this year.

Less Revenues Forcing Sugar Tax?

The drop in income tax revenues below expectations may more or less compel Congress to adopt a sugar tax, according to belief being expressed in some quarters. Up to the present, there has been no big objection voiced to the proposed tax on sugar. The tax, however, is reported to be the subject of study by both senators and representatives. They are reputedly hesitant about taxing a food necessity. On the other hand, however, the administration has been disappointed by income tax returns and needs money. This last fact, some advices report, probably will be the factor which finally swings Congress toward enactment of the full tax of 75 cents per hundredweight, raw value.

Commodity Price Trend in Recent Months Shown

New York, April 2 (AP)—How prices of basic commodities have shot up in recent months due both to expanding industrial demand armaments requirements, as criticized at Washington today by President Roosevelt, is illustrated by comparison of spot prices now and a year ago.

On April 1, 1936, steel billets were quoted at Pittsburgh at $28 a ton, today the figure is $37. Copper, today 17 cents a pound, was 9.25 cents a pound a year ago. Lead has jumped from 4.6 cents to 6.95 cents a pound, zinc from 4.9 cents to 7.5 cents and rubber from 15.15-16 cents to 27 cents.

Some other prices follow: Hides 17 cents a pound from 13 cents, crude oil at Bradford, Pa., $2.67 a barrel from $2.45, Midland Upland cotton 15.17 cents a pound from 11.69 cents, wool $1.05 a pound from 90 cents, wheat at New York, $1.59⅝ a bushel from $1.19⅞.

World Zinc Output Less

World zinc production during February totaled 128,228 short tons against 137,815 in January and 119,823 in February, 1936, according to American Bureau of Metal Statistics.

Production for first two months of 1937 totaled 266,043 tons, against 252,884 in like 1936 period.

FAR Above NORMAL

OUTPUT OVER 1929 RATE

Steel production this year has not only been running at the highest annual rate since the recovery movement started but it has been in excess of the rate in 1929 when the output was the largest on record, according to the Alexander Hamilton Institute.

The prospect is that the 1937 normal will be lower than the one estimated on the basis of present conditions and that the current rate of steel output will prove to be more excessive than the present estimate of normal indicates.

While the rate of steel output has been running above the 1929 rate, the currently estimated normal is considerably below that of 1929. One factor accounting for this lower normal is the higher price of steel.

The price of finished steel has been advanced sharply since last June. According to The Iron Age, the average price of finished steel is now 2.605 cents per pound as compared with 2.097 cents last June, an increase of 24.2 per cent. This advance carried the price to a point 12.4 per cent above the peak in 1929 when the price was 2.31" cents.

The rise in steel prices since last June was necessitated by two substantial wage increases, one of which went into effect on November 16 last year, and one on March 16 this year. As the result of the first increase, average wage rates rose from 66.4 cents per hour to 73 cents per hour.

The second increase probably carried average rates to about 83 cents per hour. This compares with the pre-depression rate of 67.4 cents in 1929.

Another factor accounting for a lower normal level of steel output in 1937 than in 1929 is the prospect that the national income this year will be below that of 1929 even though the increase over last year's income is as great for the full year as it has started out to be.

Since, on the basis of available figures, the percentage of the national income normally spent on steel promises to be about the same as in 1929, this third factor which determines the normal output of steel will not be an offset to higher steel prices and a lower national income.

In view of the fact that the current rate of steel output is considerably above the 1937 normal even as estimated at the present time, which is probably too high, it is evident that the steel industry is facing a recession unless 1937 proves to be a year of excessive production.

Such an excess is exceedingly questionable since over-production has been a feature of the situation during the last two years. This would seem to indicate a drop below normal this year rather than another excess in output.

This suggests the possibility of a recession of some magnitude, especially since it is probable that the normal 1937 output will not be as high as the current estimate.

Bidding Open on Bay State Bonds

State Treasurer William E. Hurley will receive bids until noon, April 13, for $660,000 of Commonwealth of Massachusetts bonds for Gloucester pier loan, payable 1938 to 1942. Bidders will name one rate of interest on the entire loan.

In comparing bids preference will be given to the one providing for the lowest net interest cost to the Commonwealth, total interest for the duration of the loan from April 1, 1937, less the amount of the premium paid.

Asset Value Up

Petroleum Corporation of America net asset value per share of 2,000,000 shares of capital stock outstanding at the close of business March 31, 1937 was $25.22. Net asset value of shares outstanding at Dec. 31, 1936 was $23.94 and at March 31, 1936, $20.23.

INSTALMENT CONTRACTS

By MERRYLE STANLEY RUKEYSER
Copyright, 1937, by Universal Service

New York, April 2—As part of national efforts to calm down boom tendencies, it would be timely for the sales finance companies to consider shortening the average time for repayments on instalment contracts.

At the nadir of the depression when buying was subnormal, it may have been justifiable to give business a shot in the arm in the form of easier credit terms for consumer credit.

Before the depression, leaders in the deferred financing of automobile sales recognized abuses in undue extension of the period for paying off the debt by the buyer.

Accordingly, there was a tendency to reduce the credit extension period to one year.

Instalment payments on cars were scheduled to run as long as thirty months.

MANAGED CREDIT

Properly managed, consumer credit is highly useful, and the remarkably low loss ratio under conditions of maximum record shows on what a strong foundation it rests.

In view of this, it behooves executives of the well managed instalment sales finance companies to grapple on their own initiative with current tendencies toward excesses.

No one is in position to assert dogmatically to what extent the period of payments should be shortened. It may well be that the durability and quality of products have been so improved that 18 months would constitute no greater ratio to the total life of such products as motor cars, then 12 months was before the depression. This is a matter for intelligent fact finding and executive discretion.

If the payments are spread over too long a period, the hazard is that the instalment buyer may be tempted to overcommit himself in other directions.

NEEDS RE-EXAMINATION

This whole subject needs to be critically re-examined.

The federal government, in its own housing program, popularized the idea of lengthening payments beyond those which had previously prevailed.

In order to promote housing activity, it permitted amortizations of housing loans to run over a period of twenty years.

It is important to keep the ultimate date for completing time payments well within the reasonable expected life of the product, with due regard not only to physical depreciation, but also to obsolescence and changes in popular tastes and fashions.

I touched on this subject tonight (Thursday) in a speech made at a dinner conference at the Grand Central Palace, in New York, before the Women's National Exposition of Arts and Industries. I emphasized my belief that instalment financing is not a major cause of prosperity and depressions.

HAS CREATIVE ELEMENT

Honestly conceived, instalment financing has a creative element. It helps inexperienced families to organize their finances on a more systematic basis. It leads to planned visualization of family income and outgo.

It creates a program for selecting the products which are wanted most and for pushing into the background less essential items. It enables families to balance their budgets through the exclusion of unplanned expenditures which otherwise might have absorbed a portion of their income for frivolities.

Obviously, no family, with abundant cash reserves, should elect a credit scheme of any kind, which adds necessarily to the cost in preference to a cash transaction. The financing cost should be plainly visioned by the consumer, who should not be fooled by the lure of small monthly payments.

However, it takes a degree of affluence to adhere to Shakespeare's austere advice: "Neither a borrower nor a lender be." It is obviously cheaper to save in advance of purchasing, but the advantage of doing so must be weighed against the family deprivation involved in abstention during the period of capital accumulation.

Irrespective of the relative advantages of cash vs. credit, experience shows that many seem to have a practical inability to save, lacking the type of imagination needed to act in response to abstract motivations such as the ideal of thrift.

Carloadings Up In Past Week

Washington, April 2 (INS)—Loading of revenue freight for the week ended March 27 totaled 761,109 cars, an increase of 1840 cars above the preceding week and 166,320 cars above the corresponding week in 1936, the Association of American Railroads announced today.

Miscellaneous freight 318,400, increase 4448 and 56,231; merchandise less than carload lots 170,216, decrease 1141, increase 13,983; coal 171,814, decrease 402 increase 77,893; grain and grain products 28,245, decrease 1236 and 1321; live stock 10,821, decrease 961 and 1356; forest products 38,173, increase 786 and 8331; ore 12,014, increase 1069 and 7311; coke 11,336, decrease 723, increase 5248.

THE COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS
TREASURY DEPARTMENT

Boston, April 2, 1937.

Sealed proposals for MASSACHUSETTS SERIAL BONDS amounting to $660,000 exempt from Federal and Massachusetts Income Taxes, will be received at the office of the Treasurer up to 12 o'clock noon on April 13, 1937, at which time they will be publicly opened and read.

The bonds which will be fully registered are duly authorized by Acts of the Massachusetts Legislature on account of the following loan:

GLOUCESTER PIER LOAN
Payable $132,000 each year, April 1, 1938-April 1, 1942, both inclusive

Bidders will name one rate of interest on the entire loan which rate must be a multiple of ¼ of 1%. In comparing bids preference will be given to the one providing for the lowest net interest cost to the Commonwealth (total interest for the duration of the loan from April 1, 1937, less the amount of the premium bid).

Each proposal must be accompanied by a certified check for two per cent (2%) of the amount bid for, to the order of the Treasurer and Receiver-General of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, on a national bank or trust company doing business in this Commonwealth or in the City of New York.

The Treasurer reserves the right to reject any or all bids which are not in his opinion advantageous to the interests of the Commonwealth.

WILLIAM E. HURLEY
Treasurer and Receiver-General.

POWER PROBLEM

Equipment DIFFICULT TO Obtain

By HUGH E. BRADSHAW

From two great New England utilities comes evidence of a varying sort testifying to the splendid position of electrical equipment manufacturers.

The Boston Edison Co. plans to increase its generating capacity in the belief increased demand for current will continue, while the Central Maine Power Co. is experiencing difficulty in obtaining needed equipment.

Thomas H. Carens, vice-president of Boston Edison, speaking at the dinner of the Massachusetts State Association of Master Electricians, discussed the utility outlook and revealed the management of the company expects that the substantial increase in electricity in evidence in recent years will continue. As a result of this last he said Edison has already embarked on plans to increase its generating capacity for the first time since the beginning of the depression.

* * *

President Walter S. Wyman of Central Maine provides a graphic bit of testimony as to the glutted condition of electrical equipment manufacturers' order books. One of the affiliated companies ordered a 20,000 kilowatt steam turbine engine last December. The earliest date on which delivery could be promised was March, 1938. Mr. Wyman points out that this probably means that it will not be in place and ready to operate until July or August, next year. All sorts of apparatus of a heavy sort can only be obtained, he adds, in anywhere from five months to two years after ordering. With increasing loads such long deliveries introduce a new kind of problem.

* * *

Notebook—All of the above points to an extremely satisfactory condition in the electrical equipment business . . . And also among established producers of steam boilers as well as all allied lines . . . Even though utility managers may find it most unwelcome . . . The electrical equipment stocks have been running off for some weeks now . . . In fact, it seems fair to state that as a group they started down among the first . . . It appears wise from now on, to this writer at least, to pick up stocks in the group during periods of general market weakness.

* * *

Technical stock market implications turned definitely unfavorable this morning. A thorough testing of the lows set a week or so back is now believed to be in prospect. Those who have followed advices here to lighten intermediate trading lines are in a good position to put surplus funds to work in those directions that during the next few session display resistance to selling. As already indicated, this writer thinks electricals are such a group. Rail equipments are also in an interesting position, while sight should not be lost of suppliers of equipment to the steel industry.

* * *

Odds and Ends: Collected from the markets traders and investors are prone to overlook . . . Transwestern Oil, over-the-counter, might show between 50 and 70 cents a share this year, we are told . . . Strictly a producing company, it has about 40 barrels of proven oil reserves per share of stock . . . Not allowing for bonds outstanding . . . And if 20 cents per barrel profit can be realized on the average earnings, present production allowable would slightly top the higher figure noted . . . Superior Oil of California, traded on the Los Angeles Stock Exchange, is also strictly a producer and might show around $7.50 per share this year if the price of crude holds firm . . . About 55 per cent of the 400,000 shares outstanding is said to be owned by one individual.

STOCKS In Sharp BREAK

PRICES DROP 1 TO 6 POINTS

New York, April 2—Stock market leaders tumbled 1 to 6 points today following President Roosevelt's warning signal on the excessive production of durable goods and rising prices which he indicated were unjustified.

On top of the White House news, speculative buying was restrained by the fact 400,000 soft coal miners are idle pending wage and hour adjustments; by another decline in U. S. Government securities and major commodities such as copper, and by continued nervousness over the automotive labor situation.

Outstanding shares on the downside included U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, Republic, American Steel Foundries, American Rolling Mill, Chrysler, General Motors, Anaconda, Kennecott, American Smelting, Cerro De Pasco, Phelps Dodge, U. S. Rubber, Goodyear, Goodrich, Montgomery Ward, Sears Roebuck, St. Joseph Lead, National Lead, Pullman, Skelly Oil, Standard Oil of N. J., Texas Corp., Seaboard Oil, Westinghouse, Allied Chemical, General Electric, Boeing, Deere, J. I. Case Santa Fe, N. Y. Central, Pennsylvania, Southern Pacific, Great Northern, Baltimore Ohio, Southern Railway, Paramount and Johns-Manville.

Oils were resistant for a time, but finally gave way with the rest. Utilities were only off fractionally.

Current Items

Dun & Bradstreet found that, without the allure of any special clearance events, many retailers had a larger volume of sales than in the final preiod of Easter shopping.

The Review pointed out that, despite labor interruptions and prospects of further upsets in this field, operations in the major industrial sectors were advanced.

Machine tool makers reported heavy bookings in view this month. New tool orders received by several concerns in March were understood to have been the best of the year to date, even exceeding the January level.

The French franc, at the beginning of foreign exchange transactions, was up .00¼ of a cent at 4.60 cents, and sterling was 1-16 of a cent lower at $4.89 7-16.

B. C. FORBES

Taxes, Job SCARCITY STIR Protests

By B. C. FORBES

Analyzing the volume of communications sent this column, two subjects seem to be most in the mind of ordinary folks.

Curiously, the battle for the Supreme Court is not one of them.

The two are: Labor matters and taxes—government spending.

* * *

Many citizens are comparing administration promises with administration performances. Economy was pledged. Also, a balanced budget.

But readers are pointing out just what has happened. They are not oblivious to the fact that the government is actually spending more this (fiscal) year than last year, two to three hundreds of millions of dollars more since last July 1. This unpleasant showing is being made despite the very substantial increase in federal revenues and despite smaller expenditures for relief, due to improved economic and employment conditions.

* * *

Complaints from men and women unable to find employment outnumber all others. These complaints cover a very wide range. Some declare that, although they have been registered with governmental agencies for one or even two years, they have received no word of encouragement whatsoever. The age question is brought up over and over again, applicants are, apparently, frequently rejected on the grounds that they are either too young and inexperienced or too old.

It may or may not be significant, in view of the current epidemic of strikes, that few complaints are coming from employed workers.

* * *

"I was very much interested," writes a woman, "in your article, 'Oppressive Taxes Growing menace.' Let us have more of this and often, until the indifferent taxpayers awake and protest until federal and state spendthrifts cease trying to continuously find new ways or raising taxes.

"Taxpayers, due to political-made depression of the past few years, have to economize, and it is time the state and federal governments began economizing. It is an outrage for men who never earned money of their own to be so free with taxpayers' money."

* * *

"The enclosed clipping shows you what is going on in every county seat in the union, I suppose—county agents and paid speakers gathering the farmers together to educate them how to make out their application for public funds—merely for rotating their crops, which every farmer should do without being bribed. Meanwhile, at this county seat of 5000 people there is not a single house being built, due to taxation, although there is a housing shortage."

* * *

From "a carpenter who has followed the trade since 1877:

"The employer complaining of not being able to get good men is he who has no mechanical training himself and is looking for youth instead of skill, profit instead of good work. The employer who must have skilled mechanics and is satisfied with a reasonable day's output per man has not much trouble in finding good men. Let him communicate with headquarters of the trades wanted. They can be reasonably sure of the men needed."

* * *

From "a young man, 30 years of age, who has been doing clerical work for over 15 years," but who now cannot find a job because he is told he is "too old":

"I thoroughly agree with your comments on the sit-down strikes, but you should lay more stress on the fact that Lewis and his cronies do not really represent labor. There are millions of laborers who have no use for labor unions. The labor chiefs recognize this fact when they make a business submit to a closed shop. This attitude shows that labor chiefs don't care anything about the working man, except those who pay tribute in the form of dues, assessments, etc."

"I am in the group of 30-year-olds who cannot find our niche because: We are too old—recent high school graduates or persons not over 20 years of age are wanted; or we are too young—an older person of 40-45 is desired, because the responsibilities involved make it necessary to hire the older person."

* * *

From J. Pidgeon:

"You should point out that the crisis in law and order, which we seem now to be facing, has been due mainly to the failure of industrial leaders to devise an economic statesmanship which would lead to the solution of labor's fundamental problems—insecurity and poverty. The masses will not much longer continue to endure a futile and unnecessary poverty in the midst of plenty."

Sugar Bloc Would Aid Labor in Massachusetts

Washington, April 2 (AP)—Philadelphia Democratic representatives led a campaign today for organization of a sugar bloc in the interest of domestic refineries.

Representative M. J. Stack circulated petitions urging the House agriculture committee to amend the pending administration sugar bill to provide that all Cuban sugar imported under quotas shall be in raw form only.

The petition said: "This would put to work labor and plant capacity now idle not only in the great refining city of Philadelphia but also in Massachusetts, New York, New Jersey, Maryland, Georgia, Louisiana, Texas and California; and provide additional work for labor in the coal, oil, textile, paper, lumber, and other industries supplying materials to the sugar refineries."

Lower Trends Dominate Curb

New York, April 2 (AP)—Lowering trends were dominant in a slow-moving curb market today.

Most of the normally active list stood slightly under previous closing levels and a few of the less active shares fell back a point or more as the session approached the noon hour.

Pan American Airways, Gulf Oil, Aluminum Co. of America, Wayne Pump and McWilliams Dredging were down ½ point or more. Colt's Patent Firearms, Hecla Mining and Driver-Harris reacted 1 to 2 points or so.

The Governor's Brave Veto Message

HISTORY will record Governor Hurley's veto of the bill to repeal the Teachers' Oath Law as one of the outstanding acts of his administration.

For completeness, sincerity of purpose and honest Americanism, the veto message belongs among Massachusetts' greatest documents.

In it, the Governor gave proof of his ability to rise above political influence, to protect the majority from the organized minority and to keep inviolate the trust given to him by the electorate.

He cited laws passed by previous legislators to continue the protection.

He recognized the responsibility and power that has always been associated with the teaching profession.

He called attention to the attempts of Communists, atheists and the alien-minded to influence youth today.

He said:

"I cannot escape the fact that this is no time to make it appear that we are withdrawing any of our supports for the authority of our state and nation.

"Repeal now would encourage certain vicious minorities whose motives and conduct are inimical to, and destructive of, the principles upon which this Republic was founded.

"These small groups of persons, among whom the very idea of God is repugnant, active in the opposition to the enactment of this law, and quick in the espousal of its repeal, would construe repeal triumphantly."

They will agree with him that a pledge of allegiance to the State and nation cannot be a rebuke to an educator when an almost identical pledge is taken by the President of the United States, Senators, Representatives, Governors and other important officials.

They will find truth in his statement that not one teacher has suffered because of the Oath Law since its enactment.

And, most important of all, they will derive confidence both from his determination to remain true to the oath he took and from his insistence that all others treat with equal respect the oaths they took.

Let's Help Americans

STATEMENTS of Juitsu Kitaoka, Japan's chief delegate to the international textile conference in Washington, interest New England.

"My people," said Mr. Kitaoka, "are not prepared to adopt the 40-hour work week.

"Our textile employes, numbering 1,300,000, work eight and a half hours a day, six days a week.

"They have sufficient leisure time at present because they live in company-owned homes or dormitories near the factories."

What Mr. Kitaoka should have said is that Japan does not want the 40-hour week because such humanitarian legislation would upset the coolie standards that enable her to undersell other nations in their own markets, America especially.

The years before she sold 35,000,000 yards.

This year, under a recently made agreement, she intends to sell 155,000,000 yards.

So, in spite of all the friendly attempts that have been made to curb her exports, Japan has boosted her cotton cloth business in America by nearly THREE HUNDRED AND FIFTY per cent in two years.

With nine million Americans still jobless, thousands of them cotton textile workers, the Congress in Washington ought to give Mr. Kitaoka this message to take back to his country:

"If you won't come up to our standard of living, we certainly will not go down to yours.

"By the imposition of ADEQUATE tariff duties on your cloth, we are going to let our own jobless people manufacture the 155,000,000 yards you think you are going to sell us.

"When, and only when, all our people are employed at wages befitting their rights as American citizens, we might patronize your coolie standard factories."

Such a message would mean prosperity for thousands of men and women now idle in New England. It might also mean better wages and shorter hours for thousands of other men and women in Japan.

First Woman Councillor

BOSTON, scene of history-making suffragette agitation two decades ago, continues to see the forward march of women along the road to political success.

Latest victor is Mrs. Mildred G. Harris, who, as Ward Nine's special election winner, becomes the first woman member of the City Council.

As the recipient of the largest vote in a field of eleven candidates, she will serve for the rest of the year, filling the unexpired term of her late brother, Councilman Richard D. Gleason.

Women generally should be proud of Mrs. Harris, mother of six children.

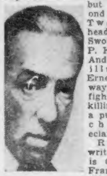
Like others of her sex who hold important elective and appointive positions in cities, states and the nation, she is proof that women's role in politics is a constantly more powerful role; that in the years to come we shall see and hear more from our mothers, sisters and wives.

The City Council, an important body with much of Boston's present and future in its hands, needs a woman's voice. As the voice, Mrs. Harris can do much good.

New York Day by Day

By O. O. McIntyre

New York, April 2—Thoughts while strolling: Overheard—"She may look front row Follies to you but she's second row to me." Two notable heads. Herbert Swope and Jos. P. Kennedy. And pals. Disillusionment: Ernest Hemingway, the bull-fighting lion-killing man, is a pushover for chocolate eclairs. Rhyme: A writer with go is Charles Frances Coe. 1937 cheer for the over-the-horizon boys: Grow old and be sneered at. Similar radio voices: Gabriel Heatter and Edwin C. Hill. One word description of Nazimova: Ageless. Clowning Teds: Cook, Healy and Woodyard.



O. O. McIntyre

Put a so'wester and oil skin hat on Walter Huston and you have the figure in the emulsion ad. And Arthur McKeogh with mustache could pass for Clifton Webb. Then there's William Frawley, who is almost a ringer for Postmaster-General Farley. What became of Tony Wons?

Arthur Hopkins would make a dandy model for one of those country grocers on a Norman Rockwell magazine cover. Abe Lyman met a pie-man tee-dum-de-dee! What most of us would give to look like Whitney Warren at 60. Longings: To play the harmonica like Larry Adler. Or a Morton Downey for a quartette.

Those girl bar flies who call Katharine Cornell Kit and Noel Coward Noey—and knowing neither. And the lads who think they have arrived when they get a choice table at "No. 21." New star of the magazines: Margaret Case Harriman. Wonder how Washington and Lincoln made the grade without irium?

No longer can writers refer to Savile Row as a world style center. Once London's street of elegant tailoring—a grouping New York has never had—it is now to be demolished, and already most garment designers have moved. Waterloo Bridge has also reached the end of its span. It began to sag in the middle and all efforts to mend it failed. A new bridge is being readied. Old London is slowly becoming new.

The Fifth avenue buses have abandoned pistol dime clutch collectors on double deck buses. There is a conductor who stands at the box to see all drop dimes, but has little else to do. And many believe the buses will soon be one man operated. For years the avenue bus conductors have been known for their Irish brogue and blarney. All seem just a few days over from Killarney, potential Fiske O'Haras with the ladies. And they add much to the zing of bus riding.

Among the astonishing theatrical phenomenon was the long run of "Murder in the Old Red Barn," a ten, twent and thirt meller which played for more than a year in an abandoned church on a serene block of the fashionable East Side. It was followed by another as promising, "Naughty Naught." The audience sits at plain pine tables, drinks beer, hisses the deep-dyed villain, cheers the tremulous heroine and joins in singing "Rosie O'Grady" chansons at intermission. The plays are presented as written 50 years ago. Harry Bannister is the impresario. The audiences are chiefly residents of the ornate apartment zone and, strangely enough, many of the young generation.

Memory of Italian food at the famous Gonfarone's was flicked by the passing of the man who conducted it. He was Anacleta Sermolino, who suggested a two-bang mustache and rings in the ears, and for years his table d'hote at Eighth and McDougall Alley was one of the city's famous eating spots. Caruso loved it and often came there. Also O. Henry, Arnold Daly, Titto Ruffo and Margaret Anglin. Sermolino closed with prohibition. He couldn't serve his type of meal without wine, he said, and refused to break the law.

I recall a first visit to Gonfarone's with William Johnston, of the World. New to town, it had for me all the literary flavor I had read about. I saw Berton Braley, then a young poet, wearing the first horn-rimmed glasses I ever saw. Hendrik Van Loon, then little known and slender, was at another table. Dreiser came there too in the flush of his "Sister Carrie" fame, but was not about that evening.

It was in the Gonfarone days, too, that I first saw the candles sputter in the tea room known as Grace Godwin's Garret on a corner of Washington Square, over Guido Bruno's bookshop. This seemed the zenith in long-locked, unwashed Bohemianism. It was there one evening I decided to shuck a newspaper job and become a free lance. And thus I learned to cut my own hair, slip cardboard in soleless shoes and Starve for Art. To this day my sympathies are for the milk bottle thief.

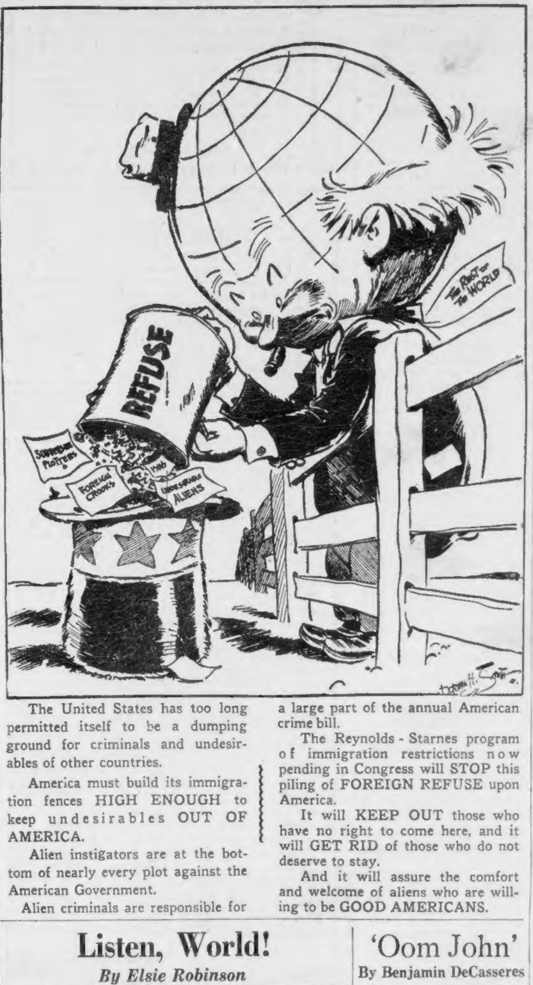
This Has Gone Far Enough

Copyright, 1937, by American Newspapers, Inc.



The United States has too long permitted itself to be a dumping ground for criminals and undesirables of other countries.

America must build its immigration fences HIGH ENOUGH to keep undesirables OUT OF AMERICA.

The Reynolds-Starnes program of immigration restrictions now pending in Congress will STOP this piling of FOREIGN REFUSE upon America.

It will KEEP OUT those who have no right to come here, and it will GET RID of those who do not deserve to stay.

And it will assure the comfort and welcome of aliens who are willing to be GOOD AMERICANS.

Listen, World!

By Elsie Robinson

I was seventeen. Shy, sassy, self-conscious, pigeon-toed seventeen—with a huge yellow pompadour that was always sliding askew—and a vast, beruffled petticoat that was always coming off—and a constant ache in my bewildered young heart because I longed—oh, how I longed!—to be popular. AND WASN'T!

Elsie Robinson

Oh, those lucky, those fortunate, those blessed-b-y-t-h-e-gods mortals who were popular! What, I wailed—sobbing into my pillow at night—was their mysterious secret?

Why did everybody like them, flock around them, quote what they said, mimic what they did, copy what they wore, love them for what they were?

No, they weren't actually mean to me. They didn't really hate me—maybe. But they stayed way off by themselves in their own place and let me stay in mine. With my heart completely broken. And what—WHAT—WHAT could I do about it? Nothing!

Know how it feels, don't you? Perhaps you're feeling that way yourself, right now, at 17 — or 27, 67, or even 70—for the years don't matter in the least when the heart's hungry. Day after day the same old misery goes on.

"I WON'T GIVE UP"

And with it there, at 17, there came to me the same fierce determination that I WOULDN'T BE LICKED. No—I ached, trying in vain to swallow the lump in my throat—I WON'T give up! People must like me . . . they MUST . . . THEY MUST! Maybe I wasn't as beautiful or as brilliant as some, as graceful, witty or charming, but there must be ways.

And so tomorrow I'd try something else. Something that was SURE to make people crazy about me. I'd be even more helpful and filled with good advice. Or perhaps I'd be the Crowd Cut-Up. Bright and sparkling . . . reckless and gay . . . the know-it-all with the lightning come-back! Or I'd go in for the finer things of life . . . deep reading, heavy philosophy.

What tears I shed, what dreams I dreamed, in my vast young loneliness, my tragic young bewilderment! And how many years I wasted—as you, and you, and YOU have done—experimenting, trying to find my way into people's hearts—until at last someone told me the simple secret of it all.

There was no deep, dark mystery to Popularity. One need not possess rare talent or exotic allurement. One need only—

GIVE ONESELF.

Not try to be different—wiser, stronger, merrier, more dashing. Just frankly admit that one was ordinary! Confess one made the same mistakes as the other fellow—or even worse ones! Telling him about your blunders—and beating him to it—there was the beginning of Oneness between lonely human beings.

For what was it that kept people apart? A sense of their own failures and weaknesses . . . piling up, bit by bit, until it became a wall shutting you in, shutting other folk out. But suppose you wouldn't let that wall pile up around you, between you?

Supose you let everyone see that YOU had been through the same foolishness and shame, the same grief and blame . . . why then people had to let you into their lives, had to come into yours!

POPULARITY'S SECRET

For if you could give yourself like that, bravely and generously . . . calling yourself a fool, admitting you'd been the world's record blunderer . . . then people would love you wherever you went. For you would destroy all walls forever . . . take the sting from all secret hurts and hates and horrors.

TO HUMBLE YOURSELF . . . TO GIVE YOUR LIFE, EVEN THOSE PARTS OF YOUR LIFE WHICH MIGHT SEEM BELITTLING . . . THAT WAS THE SECRET OF POPULARITY!

There was the answer to anyone's lonely wall!

'Oom John'

By Benjamin DeCasseres

Some called him Ol' John, others "Oom John" and still others John O' Birds.

He was born just plain John Burroughs, and Saturday, April 3, is the one hundredth anniversary of his birth on a farm near Roxbury, Delaware, County, N. Y.

John Burroughs, who was nature-intoxicated all his life as Spinoza was "the God-intoxicated one," has been compared to Henry David Thoreau, Walt Whitman, John James Audubon and Ralph Emerson; but while all these men were rooted deeply in him, Burroughs was uniquely the sage of the Catskills in his own right, and the birds, animals and flowers roundabout he was a modern Saint Francis of Assisi, who called all animals, birds and flowers "brother."

Whether one reads his fine nature book, "Wake Robin," or his superb book on his friend, Walt Whitman, we find in Burroughs the man who combined a rare mixture of nature-lover and literature. He had not a bite of Thoreau, but he did have the cosmic sweep of both Whitman and Emerson.

The creed of Ol' John was summed up as follows by himself:

"I AM IN LOVE WITH THIS WORLD . . . IT HAS BEEN HOME. IT HAS BEEN MY POINT OF OUTLOOK UPON THE UNIVERSE. I HAVE NOT BRUISED MYSELF AGAINST IT, NOR TRIED TO USE IT IGNOBLY. I HAVE TILLED ITS SOIL, I HAVE GATHERED ITS HARVESTS. I HAVE WAITED UPON ITS SEASONS AND ALWAYS HAVE I REAPED WHAT I HAVE SOWN. WHILE I DELVED I DID NOT LOSE SIGHT OF THE SKY OVERHEAD.

"I HAVE CLIMBED ITS MOUNTAINS, ROAMED ITS FORESTS, SAILED ITS WATERS, CROSSED ITS DESERTS, FELT THE STING OF ITS FROSTS, THE OPPRESSION OF ITS HEATS, THE DRENCH OF ITS RAINS, THE FURY OF ITS WINDS, AND ALWAYS HAVE BEAUTY AND JOY WAITED UPON MY GOINGS AND COMINGS."

And a salute to Henry Ford on Oom John's hundredth anniversary, for it was Mr. Ford who sought out Burroughs, cleared his farm of weeds and debt, provided for his security in his old age—and taught him how to drive a car at 75

The Fashion Pirates

The Human Side of the News

By Edwin C. Hill

Dress goods is a billion-dollar industry. In the depth of the depression it was losing $200,000,000 a year. Now it is getting in the black again. And that means a renewal on all fronts of the war against style pirates which has risen and ebbed and risen again in the capitals of the world for a decade or more.

Edwin C. Hill

The pirates of the Spanish Main were just small fry. All their loot in doubloons and pieces of eight would weigh but lightly in the accounting of the fashion buccaneers, who deal Tessie, the ticket-chopper, a Lanvin model for $8.38, and who cause Mrs. Van Hoophen-Hyphen's nervous breakdown when she meets Tessie on the street ahead of her in the gown for which she paid $500.

American manufacturers organize. The Federal Trade Commission sustains them from pirates. Suits—law-suits, not Worth ensembles—pile up in the Springtime. Copyright and patent laws give no adequate protection. There is some confusion among the manufacturers themselves. The Fashion Originators' Guild, the manufacturers' association, finds itself involved in litigation against firms who are obviously not style racketeers. It has been the same story in Paris and London.

AN INTERNATIONAL WAR

There are mountains of judicial precedent to set up before the elusive property rights innate in an original design are definitely established. Last February, Judge Clauson, of the British High Court of Justice, in a desert of packed agate type which no stylish person would ever read, found for the pirates. He ruled that the mere creation of an unique or beautiful design did not establish an exclusive property right to that design. There was a conflicting decision of France, and there has been all sorts of bickering between the two countries, accusing each other of stealing their designs.

Blackstone, hammering the framework of modern law out of the Codes of Justinian and the ancient common law and what not, didn't have to bother with such matters as this. His main concentration was on the theft of milady's tippet, or fichu, or gown or girdle, rather than the theft of its design. There must be a new outreach of the law to deal explicitly with the theft of ideas.

Hollywood realizes that just now. There is a great dither [illegible] because [illegible] sound track is being made, or get a peak at the script. That night the carefully nurtured film ally breaks out on the air and "it is stale, flat and unprofitable when the film is distributed," so say the movie joke-mongers. One wonders how Blackstone would have figured that.

EUROPEAN INTRIGUE

Paris has had a longer and harder battle against the film pirates than New York. Over there there's espionage and whispering, strategems and wicked devices which remind one of the more deadly and devious diplomatic intrigue. It takes me back to an open air cafe high up in Montmarte on an enchanted June evening quite a few years ago.

A slender, pallid, beautiful young woman entered, escorted by a handsome army officer. Her gown was simple, but every woman in the place put aside all well-bred reserve and stared at it avidly. Such as this unqualified observer's fumbling effort to indicate that the girl had style.

"She probably made that dress," said my companion.

"The design, I mean, she probably copied it. I know that girl—she is a Czechoslovakian, salting away quite a few thousand francs every week in a dozen or more banks on the Continent, chiefly in Prague. She was a midinette in the establishment of one of the great couturiers, earning the French equivalent of about $2.50 a week, working long hours seven days a week.

"Remaining inside one of the big shops with such outside contacts, she earned and saved some money. Then she went into business for herself. She had a cellar hideout in the Rue de Tournon, near where it branches off the Rue Vaugirard. A rich American would order a gown, 'Moonlight and Roses,' for, say, about $1000, at Lanvins', Paquin's, Soeurs' or Patou's.

"The messenger, in collusion with the charming lady, would make a little detour on the way to the hotel to deliver the gown. Just one swift intense look and the gown was copied.

That's That

Last week, the United Automobile Workers, conducting a sit-down strike against the Chrysler Company, were defying a Detroit court which had issued an order for their eviction. Now they are in that same court, seeking a mandatory injunction to force the company to recognize the union as the sole bargaining agent for all the Chrysler employes. It is strange to see a group of men appealing for the aid of a court they have been defying.

The injunction sought would restrain the company from discriminating against any employes "in order to encourage membership in any labor organization, or to discourage membership in the United Automobile Workers of America." But the effect of such an injunction would be to force employes to join the United Automobile Workers' Union and to discourage membership in any other union.

Senator Robinson, Democratic floor leader in the Senate, announced, after a conference with President Roosevelt, that no condition "has so far arisen" to warrant federal intervention in sit-down strikes. The Senator went on to say federal action could be invoked only where federal laws are violated, federal property is interferred with, or state authorities ask Federal aid to preserve law and order. Under the circumstances, this is assumed to be a statement of the President's position. But it would be better for the President to speak for himself. No one questions his ability to do that.

Actual federal interference is not needed to check the spread of sit-down strikes. If the President only called public atention to the fact that the seizure of private property by any group of people is unlawful, that would have a beneficial effect. And if he merely whispered to his friend, John L. Lewis, that sit-down strikes are wrong, there would be a speedy end to this kind of strikes.

The first all-pedestrian traffic conference has been held at Providence, R. I. It is high time walkers gave serious thought to the part they play in traffic problems. A survey of automobile "accidents" in Columbus, O., last year revealed that 64.9 per cent of the persons killed and 53.4 per cent of all those injured were pedestrians

Careless walking is just as fatal as careless driving. But there is this difference. While the careless driver may kill some other person, the careless walker only kills himself. Of the 36,800 persons killed by automobiles in the United States in 1936, 16,160 were pedestrians, 28.7 per cent of whom were jaywalking and [illegible] per cent of whom were disregarding traffic signals at street intersections. You can't be too careful when crossing streets.

Claims made in administration circles that a majority of the members of the Senate favor President Roosevelt's Supreme Court packing bill may be taken with several grains of salt. If supporters of this measure really were confident of enough strength to pass it now, they would be bringing it out for an immediate vote instead of talking about holding off action for several months. Senator Ashurst, chairman of the judiciary committee, whose job it is to try to get the bill through the Senate, has said if he can he will postpone or delay the vote "until the snow flies." He means next winter's snow.

President Roosevelt has complained he is one of the very few Presidents who never had a chance to appoint a judge to the United States Supreme Court. But that isn't a compelling reason why he should be given authority to appoint six.

If Congress should decide President Roosevelt must be permitted to name six Supreme Court judges NOW because he hasn't appointed any up to this time, 23 states which never have had representation on the nation's highest judicial tribunal might argue that the court should be enlarged still more to give them representation. Arizona, Colorado, Delaware, Florida, Idaho, Indiana, Mississippi, Missouri, Montana, Nebraska, Nevada, New Mexico, North Dakota, Oklahoma, Oregon, Rhode Island, South Dakota, Texas, Vermont, Washington, West Virginia and Wisconsin never have had one of their citizens on the Supreme Bench, according to a check made by Senator Andrews of Florida.

Plans have been made in England to move government offices from London to a secret location near the Scottish border when the next war starts. This is on the assumption that hostilities will start in the air and London naturally will be the first objective of the enemy. It used to be that statesmen who brought on wars could keep out of danger by staying out of the battle zone. But with the development of the airplane as a weapon of offense, there will be no safe place in any nation in the next war. Until they think they have found a way to protect their own skins, governments may find a way to stave off war.
